Congress Votes To Uphold the Monroe Doctrine

Serves Notice U. S. Will Use Force If Necessary If Transfers Are Made

Votes 382 to 8 To Keep All Nations from Seizing Possessions of Great Britain and France

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP) — Congress served virtual notice on the world today that the United States would fight to uphold the Monroe Doctrine.

By a vote of 382 to 8, the House passed a resolution, already approved by the Senate, declaring that this country would not "acquiesce" in the transfer of territory in the Western Hemisphere from one non-American nation to another.

Although no countries were mentioned, Germany was in the minds of Congressmen. They said that the resolution left no doubt of its meaning: that the United States would use force, if necessary, to defend the famous doctrine which, as interpreted here, would bar such changes as the transfer of French or British possessions in this hemisphere to other powers.

Must Return to Senate

The resolution, before going to President Roosevelt for his signature, must return to the Senate for action on minor amendments.

Just before passage, the House refused, 104 to 66 on a standing vote to add to the bill an amendment stating:

"That in the wars of the European powers in matters relating to themselves we have never taken any part nor does it comport with our policy so to do."

Rep. Tinkham (R-Mass), who offered the amendment, said the words were taken verbatim from President Monroe's famous declaration of 1823.

In another development bearing on this country's relations with Germany, the state department moved today to look into remarks by Baron Edgar von Spiegel, German consul general at New Orleans, which Gov. Sam H. Jones of Louisiana held were unfriendly to the United States.

Secretary Hull asked Jones for further information at the same time as a telegram arrived from the governor requesting an investigation. The governor's original communication gave no details.

Von Spiegel Belligerent

Von Spiegel was quoted in a newspaper interview last week as saying that Germany would not forget that this country was aiding her enemies. Later he said his remarks were confidential and had been misrepresented.

Meanwhile the navy announced that the Cruiser Quincy had been ordered to Montevideo, Uruguay, where the Uruguayan government has taken steps to suppress Nazi organization and has arrested eleven Germans alleged to have

Roosevelt Plans Service for All Young Americans

Would Place Some in Fighting Forces, Others in Industry

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP) — President Roosevelt disclosed today that he was working on a huge plan for eventual government service for all of America's young men, some of whom would be in the fighting forces and the rest in such vital activities as industrial production and conservation of resources.

Young women, too, may be included in the plan, he said at a press conference, at which he emphasized that a period of disciplined training, say a year for each youth, would be good for the young people of the nation, besides promoting the national defense.

Almost as he spoke, the House Naval Committee recommended a $4,000,000,000 additional naval program, to give the United States far and away the mightiest navy that ever sailed the seas. The committee, with its thoughts on the German march in Europe, acted with unheard of speed. Only this morning it had received the program from Admiral Harold R. Stark, the chief of naval operations.

Still in Study Stage

Stressing that the idea of universal training was still in the study stage, President Roosevelt said he might have something to say to Congress on the matter in three, four or six weeks, if the legislators were still in session. He did not say whether the plan contemplated calling up all young men in certain age groups at the very start, or whether it would be put into effect more gradually.

But he did assert that he felt some sort of training, involving a measure of discipline, ultimately should be provided for every boy.

The chief executive said he had spoken hastily when he recently praised a newspaper editorial recommending universal military training. He was thinking, he explained, of military training in the broad sense, training of men who would be in uniform fighting, in uniform behind the lines, in factories and munitions plants and those maintaining a certain necessary conservation of resources.

The $4,000,000,000 naval program, which would take seven years to complete, would authorize the navy to build 200 combat ships, raising the total to 738. Stark said that if Congress approved the authorization legislation, he would ask a $175,000,000 appropriation immediately to start work on the program.

The proposal was submitted as a substitute for a $1,200,000,000 naval expansion bill introduced in Congress only yesterday by Senator Walsh (D-Mass) and Rep. Vinson (D-Ga), respective chairmen of the Senate and House Naval Committees.

Calls Plan "Essential"

Testifying publicly after a closed session of the House Committee, Stark said in response to a question by Chairman Vinson that in view of World conditions he considered the plan "essential" to the defense of this country, its possessions and the Monroe doctrrine.

Stark did not break down his proposal in terms of ships, but said that it would virtually double the navy's present authorized tonnage. That tonnage he placed at about 1,-

Committee Asks 4 Billions for Navy Expansion

Would Provide for 200 Additional Combat Ships for U. S. Fleet

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP)—The House Naval Committee, acting with unprecedented speed, unanimously recommended today a $4,000,000,000 expansion of the fleet designed to give the United States the world's greatest navy.

Expansion legislation, recommended earlier by Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, would authorize the navy to build 200 additional combat ships and increase its total number of underage and overage fighting ships to 738. The legislation is merly an authorization measure and carries no funds.

The new program would require about seven years to complete and Stark said it would mean "almost doubling" the present size of the fleet.

Stark had told the committee today that he would ask for $175,000,000 this session to get the construction started as soon as possible —provided Congress approved the expansion.

Hitler and Mussolini Fix Peace Terms, but They Remain a Secret

Not Likely To Be Made Public until Accepted or Rejected by France; Harsh Offer Expected

By LYNN HEINZERLING

MUNICH, Germany, June 18 (AP)—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini totaled up today in a quiet study of the great stone fuehrerhaus the price which broken France must pay for peace, but ended this second meeting of Munich without immediately disclosing just how high that price is to be.

"The Fuehrer and Duce x x x agreed upon the position of both governments toward the French demand for an armistice," said an unamplified official announcement.

They left the city soon afterward.

DeGaulle Says Union of French, British Can Win

General Sure That with Help of U. S. Hitler Can Be Defeated

LONDON, June 18 (AP)—General de Gaulle, French undersecretary of national defense in the resigned Reynaud government, declared tonight that union of Britain and France plus the vast industrial stores of the United States would enable the Allies "to crush our enemies."

Speaking out in favor of British-French union, a British suggestion which the Reynaud government turned down and led to its resignation last Sunday, de Gaulle in a broadcast from London declared:

"Whatever happens the flame of French resistance must and shall not be extinguished. Believe me, I speak with knowledge when I tell you the same methods which have brought about our defeat can quite well one day bring victory.

"France with her vast empire behind her can unite with the British empire and utilize to the full, as England is doing, the vast industrial resources of the United States.

"In spite of all our mistakes, all our deficiencies, and all our sufferings there are in the universe sufficient means to enable us one day to crush our enemy.

"The generals who for many years have commanded the French armies have formed a government. That government, alleging that our armies have been defeated, has opened negotiations with the enemy to put an end to the fighting.

"We certainly have been and still are submerged by the mechanical strength of the enemy both on land and in the air * * * the tanks, airplanes and tactics of the Germans astounded our generals to such an extent they have been brought to the pass where they are today.

Four Nazi Raiders Shot Down by British While Attacking Coast Cities

One Briton Injured and Dwellings Are Damaged, but Loss Is Not Serious, London Asserts; French Forces Notified That No Armistice Has Been Agreed upon and That Fighting Will Continue

By The Associated Press

German bombers howled up and down the English East coast from the Thames Estuary to Yorkshire last night and early today while warbroken but unconquered France awaited the peace terms which Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini are reported to have decided quickly and secretly at Munich.

Four of the German raiders were shot down in the spectacular aerial fighting and ground gunning along England's shores—a preview of the epochal "Battle for Egland" which Prime Minister Winston Churchill forecast yesterday.

One Briton was injured seriously and some dwellings were damaged.

NO "HONORABLE PEACE"

That the demands of the German and Italian dictators on France might not be the "honorable peace" which the French insist upon was seen in the order from Premier-Marshal Henri Philippe Petain to his bettered troops to fight on against the Nazi invaders of France.

It was explained in Munich, scene of the historic meting of the axis chieftains, that the world probably would be left waiting for details of their decision until France accepts or rejects.

Hitler and Mussolini left Munich immediately for undisclosed destinations, presumably their war headquarters.

While the two geography-revisers of a "new Europe" strode from the meeting which will change the map of the world, the French calmly awaited the bad news.

FRENCH CONTINUE TO FIGHT

Responding to the order to fight on, issued in the name of Marshal Petain and Generalissimo Weygand, weary Poilus fought up and down a broken front with a heroism born of desperation.

"All French and Allied combatants on land, sea and in the air are notified that no armistice and no suspension of fighting have occurred," said the order broadcast from Bordeaux. "Negotiations are the only thing that has been planned and they have not yet commenced."

But the stubbornly fighting French were no match for the Germans. The invaders stormed down through the countryside and grabbed another rich prize, the port of Cherbourg, where many transatlantic passengers get their first glimpse of France in peace-time.

The Spanish state radio late last night reported squadrons of planes, presumably French, escaping from their overrun homeland, had been seen flying Southward over the Mediterranean toward Africa. The high-flying craft passed over the Spanish island of Mallorca, one of the Balearic group.

Effects of European events on the United States was brought home forcefully by President Roosevelt's assertion that the country undoubtedly would come to some form of government service for every boy in the land.

It might not be military service in the strict sense of the word, the president explained, and would take in youths regardless of their walk of life.

Year's Training Suggested

Mr. Roosevelt said a year's training might be required and that if Congress is in session he might have something to say on the subject in a letter or message in the next six weeks.

Invasion-threatened Britain reflected the same calmness as her hapless ally. Confidently adding up Britain's assets and predicting an ultimate victory, Prime Minister Churchill told his people:

"Hitler knows he will have to break us in this island or lose the war."

Now that the battle of France wanes to the end, Churchill pro-

French Sullenly Watch Departure Of British Troops from France

By DREW MIDDLETON

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, June 17 (Delayed) (AP)—All that is left of the British expeditionary force after thirty-eight days that shook the world, tramped stolidly through the cobblestoned streets of a French port today to ships waiting to carry them home to battle for Britain.

As they marched, French soldiers of a dozen regiments, sailors and nondescript civilians stood sullenly watching.

There were no cheers of "vive Les Anglais," no smiling children to salute the Tommies with the British "Thumbs-up" gesture.

With lightning speed, the news the British were withdrawing and that the French army, already cracking, was covering the withdrawal, spread through the city.

French Appear Sullen

There was no actual antagonism toward the British—only sullen resignation to the idea of defeat.

Britain's Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Lieut.-Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the Imperial General staff, conferred with Former French premier Paul Reynaud at Tours Thursday night.

They hastened there after a series of warning messages from their commanders had outlined the hopelessness of the British situation unless the French could hold their own part of the line.

Speaking plainly, Churchill and Sir John told Reynaud that Britain would fight in France "so long as the French fight."

Then, on Sunday, the long British trek to the coast began.

It was not a withdrawal similar to that from Dunkerque. This time the line was miles further east, and troops and transports rolled through sections of Britanny where no British soldiers had been since 1918.

German Air Force Quiet

During the withdrawal, the German air force was remarkably quiet.

The debarkation port had not

Fireworks Injunction Granted by O'Dunne

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP)—A permanent injunction against enforcement of fireworks regulations drawn recently by State Insurance Commissioner John B. Gontrum was issued today by Judge Eugene O'Dunne.

Under the injunction, only fireworks regulations consisting of "written orders directed to the owners or occupants of specified premises or buildings," can be enforced.

The judge held that Gontrum exceeded his powers in establishing the regulations.

The Baltimore Fireworks and Specialty Company, Inc., and Harry C. Kahn and Brothers, Company, wholesale fireworks dealers, asked for the injunction, asserting the regulations violated their constitutional rights.

U. S. and Great Britain Pictured As Fighting Large Part of World

ROME, June 18 (AP)—The war has been reduced to a struggle between the United States and Great Britain on one side and "a large part of the rest of the world" on the other, an authoritative Fascist spokesman declared today.

Fascists contemplated a "second Munich," which, they said, must wipe British influence from continental Europe for all time.

With France in collapse, and Britain fighting with material assistance from the United States, Virginio Gayda, Premier Mussolini's some-time editorial spokesman, said the war had settled into a "purely Anglo-Saxon struggle against a large part of the rest of the world."

"England Remains Alone"

"England remains alone to fight with her imperial forces and with the aid of war material and finance promised by the United States," Gayda wrote.

"It remains to be seen how long and in what effective form this war can last."

Sternly, Fascists warned that French rejection of the terms fixed for her at Munich would bring a swift "final assault" by combined German and Italian forces ringing the French from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean.

These views were expressed privately and without amplification by informed Fascist quarters while Italians awaited official word on the kind of peace the fuehrer and Il Duce had in mind for the French.

The official Stefani news agency asserted France would receive "much more generous" treatment than she could have expected had she accepted the eleventh-hour British offer of a British-French union.

"The gigantic hatred toward England in France may be the basis on which the winners and losers will build their neighborliness in a Europe freed forever from British domination," Stefani declared.

The Fascist press played up reports that the French felt they had been virtually deserted by the British, giving force to expectations that these reports might be used as a lever by the Germans to separate the western powers, then attempt to pound the British into submission.

The Italian air force launched new raids on British and French positions in the Mediterranean and Africa, while Fascist land forces continued to hold off on any important attacks on French territory.

Johnson Sounds Grave Warning Against Trojan Horse Treachery

CHICAGO, June 18 (AP)—Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson declared tonight that "we must be on the alert" for Trojan Horses "throughout the Western Hemisphere."

Explaining, by way of example, that the greatest danger to the Panama Canal was not an attack by land, sea or air, but "sabotage with within," he stated:

"We must mobilize our resources not only against enemies outside our gates who may crash our geographical frontiers, but also against those within our country who have abused our hospitality or debased their citizenship in an effort to destroy our spiritual America. We must guard against the instruments of disruption and revolution that have smuggled themselves into the Western Hemisphere."

Preparation Paramount

Johnson, in a speech prepared for the convention of the Institute of Food Technologists and for a broadcast over the MBS network, asserted that preparedness must be achieved "at whatever cost is necessary." He added:

"Extensive as our program may be today, it might become but a drop in the bucket with what we may have to pay if we do not utilize our brains, energy and resources toward getting ready now."

Johnson told his audience that it might become necessary to send food to a U. S. army outside the nation's boundaries, but emphasized that he was not referring to any possibility of an expeditionary force to the old world.

"On the contrary," he said, "I am unalterably opposed to the use of our troops in Europe, and in that view I am merely supporting the policy of the commander-in-chief of our army and navy.

"It must be recognized, however, that the United States is committed to a policy of hemisphere defense. It may become incumbent on us to dispatch troops to points anywhere

French Sullenly Watch Departure Of British Troops from France

By DREW MIDDLETON

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, June 17 (Delayed) (AP)—All that is left of the British expeditionary force after thirty-eight days that shook the world, tramped stolidly through the cobblestoned streets of a French port today to ships waiting to carry them home to battle for Britain.

As they marched, French soldiers of a dozen regiments, sailors and nondescript civilians stood sullenly watching.

There were no cheers of "vive Les Anglais," no smiling children to salute the Tommies with the British "Thumbs-up" gesture.

With lightning speed, the news the British were withdrawing and that the French army, already cracking, was covering the withdrawal, spread through the city.

French Appear Sullen

There was no actual antagonism toward the British—only sullen resignation to the idea of defeat.

Britain's Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Lieut.-Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the Imperial General staff, conferred with Former French premier Paul Reynaud at Tours Thursday night.

They hastened there after a series of warning messages from their commanders had outlined the hopelessness of the British situation unless the French could hold their own part of the line.

Speaking plainly, Churchill and Sir John told Reynaud that Britain would fight in France "so long as the French fight."

Then, on Sunday, the long British trek to the coast began.

It was not a withdrawal similar to that from Dunkerque. This time the line was miles further east, and troops and transports rolled through sections of Britanny where no British soldiers had been since 1918.

German Air Force Quiet

During the withdrawal, the German air force was remarkably quiet.

Johnson Sounds Grave Warning Against Trojan Horse Treachery

CHICAGO, June 18 (AP)—Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson declared tonight that "we must be on the alert" for Trojan Horses "throughout the Western Hemisphere."

Explaining, by way of example, that the greatest danger to the Panama Canal was not an attack by land, sea or air, but "sabotage with within," he stated:

"We must mobilize our resources not only against enemies outside our gates who may crash our geographical frontiers, but also against those within our country who have abused our hospitality or debased their citizenship in an effort to destroy our spiritual America. We must guard against the instruments of disruption and revolution that have smuggled themselves into the Western Hemisphere."

Preparation Paramount

Johnson, in a speech prepared for the convention of the Institute of Food Technologists and for a broadcast over the MBS network, asserted that preparedness must be achieved "at whatever cost is necessary." He added:

"Extensive as our program may be today, it might become but a drop in the bucket with what we may have to pay if we do not utilize our brains, energy and resources toward getting ready now."

Johnson told his audience that it might become necessary to send food to a U. S. army outside the nation's boundaries, but emphasized that he was not referring to any possibility of an expeditionary force to the old world.

"On the contrary," he said, "I am unalterably opposed to the use of our troops in Europe, and in that view I am merely supporting the policy of the commander-in-chief of our army and navy.

"It must be recognized, however, that the United States is committed to a policy of hemisphere defense. It may become incumbent on us to dispatch troops to points anywhere

Holt Charges FDR Stirs Up Hatred Of Hitler, Duce

McCarran Also Accuses President of Warlike Attitude

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP)—Declaring that the Roosevelt administration had stirred up hatred and that only a "spark" was needed to plunge the nation into war, Senator Holt (D.-W. Va.) blocked immediate action today on a resolution empowering the President to send Red Cross "mercy ships" into war zones.

"This little innocent resolution might be the spark that would send thousands of American boys to their death," Holt boomed, his face blanched with emotion.

"I shall raise my voice to object to creating incidents when this country is ripe for somebody to set off the dynamite in order to cover up the failures of the past."

Previously, Senator McCarran (D.-Nev.), said that the United States faced an emergency —"an emergency which was created, I am sorry to say, by some expressions which were uttered by the head of this government not very long ago, which aroused the hatred of foreign countries at war."

McCarran Alarmed

The westerner warned that because of this hatred "everything possible may be done to throw us over the precipice into war."

McCarran did not state whether he referred to President Roosevelt's remarks, when Italy joined Germany in the war against the Allies, that the "hand that held the dagger struck it into its neighbor's back."

"It was an unfortunate thing, an unhappy event," McCarran said. "I think that is recognized throughout the length and breadth of America today."

Holt was able to block consideration of the resolution because Chairman Pittman (D.-Nev.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had asked unanimous consent to put aside the tax bill, which was the pending business.

Barred From Combat Zones

Pittman explained that the neutrality act prohibited Red Cross vessels from entering combat zones unless granted safe conduct by all belligerents. He said the U. S. McKeesport, chartered by the Red Cross and loaded with $500,000 of food and medical supplies, left this country two days ago for Bordeaux, France.

Germany and Italy had been unable to give full assurances of safe conduct, Pittman continued, while it was impossible to communicate with some of the belligerents, Belgium, Norway and Holland. Pittman said the ship had been ordered to Bilboa, Spain, but it was not certain the supplies could reach France from there.

"Just let one ship be sunk with the American flag on the masthead and the Red Cross on the side and every red-blooded American would rush into this holocaust of hell," McCarran said. "We have no place there."

Holt Backs McCarran

Holt agreed with McCarran and added that the war sentiment included "some high officials of this country who have charge of determining the destination of the vessels."

"Newspapers and radio commentators say that the President is discussing with persons at the White House the question of whether or not he can have a declaration of war," Holt shouted. "I realize it may not be wise to say what I am saying, but I believe it. As long as I have a voice in this body I shall raise it against any chances of provoking an incident by which we can be drawn into war."

The West Virginia senator said that if "this particular vessel should be sunk, and if the proper kind of propaganda should lay the sinking at the door of Germany, immediately the flames of hatred would break out which have been generated by men high in this administration and generated on the floor of the Senate by war mongering speeches."

Standard Form for Reporting Accidents

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP) — A standard form for reporting all accidents will be used by the commissioner of motor vehicles, the state and Baltimore city police, the Maryland Traffic Safety Committee announced today.

E. R. McShane, executive secretary of the committee, said the reports "will eanble all interested departments to be in constant touch with locations showing high accident frequency together with all pertinent information of the causes."

The standardized reports will give "the traffic-planner a better opportunity to plan preventive measures," McShane added.

The report will contain the names of drivers involved in accidents and other pertinent information, he explained. The standrdized forms were adopted as the result of studies made by Holger Jensen, chairman of the statistical committee.

Stimson Would Throw Our Ports Open To British and French Navy Ships

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 18 (AP)—Henry L. Stimson, secretary of state during the Hoover administration, tonight advocated that the United States "throw open all our ports to the British and French naval and merchant marine for all repairs, refueling and other services."

In a speech broadcast nationally Stimson declared successive air attacks on naval bases in Great Britain might force its fleet from the Atlantic and deprive it of power.

"On the other hand," he continued, "if assured of our supplies, and of the use of our bases, it could in all probability continue to command that ocean and our own fleet could devote itself to holding the Pacific against the manifest dangers which may face us there."

Urges Cooperation

He contended the United States Navy and Maritime forces of France and Britain should work in "harmonious cooperation."

"We should not be compelled helplessly to await attack," Stimson asserted, "while a powerful aggressor chose his own opportunity."

Stimson recommended also that the United States repeal provisions of "our ill-starred so-called neutrality venture, accelerate by every means the sending of planes and other munitions to Britain and France, if necessary in our own ships and under convoy."

"We should at once adopt a system of universal compulsory training and service which would not only be the most potent evidence that we are in earnest but which is at the present moment imperative if we are to have men ready to operate the planes and other munitions, the creation of which Congress has just authorized by a practically unanimous vote."

Believes Hitler Bluffing

Stimson said America "should not be fooled by the evident bluff of Hitler's so-called fifth-column movements in South America."

"They are, on the face of them," attempts to frighten us from sending help where it will be most affective," he said. "We should combat the defeatist arguments which are being made in this country as to the unconquerable power of Germany.

"I believe that if we use our brains and curb our prejudices we can, by keeping command of the sea, beat her again as we did in 1918."

Churchill Calls

in the hour of French military collapse, the prime minister "cast up a dread balance sheet."

Tonight, after visiting King George VI, Churchill repeated the main points of his speech in a broadcast which was relayed to the United States.

With supreme sureness he proclaimed the beginning of "the battle of England."

He counted off Britain's men under arms: more than 1,250,000 regulars, 500,000 local defense volunteers; Canadian armies on England's soil.

Praises British Navy

He said the navy could drown an invading force in the channel or blow it to pieces as it tried to land.

He exulted in the remaining, if outnumbered strength of the British air force; disclosed the "painful decision" to withhold Britain's full metropolitan fighting plane strength from France and added:

"We are now assured of immense continued and increased support in munitions of all kinds from the United States and especially of airplanes and pilots from across the ocean."

Churchill made two predictions.

"If we can stand up to him (Hitler)," he said, "all Europe may be freed and the life of the world may move forward into broad, sunlit uplands . . .

"But if we fail, the whole world, including the United States x x x will sink into the abyss of a new dark age made more sinster and perhaps more prolonged by the lights of a perverted science."

Urges French To Fight On

Even while he admitted "the battle of France" was lost, Churchill urged the French to fight on, to sign no separate peace.

The French, he said, have "not yet" stopped fighting. "We do not know yet what will happen in France or whether French resistance will be prolonged both in France and in the French empire overseas."

The British, he went on, cannot feel able to free France from her treaty obligations to fight on to the end with Britain; "the French government," he said, "will be throwing away great opportunities and casting away their future if they do not continue the war..."

As for Mussolini, Churchill dismissed him with a taunt:

"We are told," he said, "that the Italian navy is coming to gain sea superiority in these waters . . . if that is seriously intended, I can only say we shall be delighted to offer Mussolini free, safeguarded passage through the straits of Gibraltar, in order that he may play the part he aspires to do . . .

Belittle Italians

"There is a general curiosity in the British fleet to find out whether the Italians are up to the level they were in the last war or whether they have fallen off."

He gave no hint of the future of the French fleet, which has operated under British general command since the war started, but in the House of Lords Viscount Caldecote said he was confident the French would seek to "remove every hindrance" to continuation of the struggle by their British ally.

Moreover, French sources in London said they considered it "probable" that the French near east and African armies would keep up resistance, with air and naval forces operating from British bases and government representatives established in England.

Churchill disclosed that only three British divisions were able to stand in line in the battle of France with the French; that the battle was lost before more could be re-equipped and transported, after the disaster of Flanders.

He spoke strongly against recriminations over this; he refused to accept "distinctions" between members of the present government; he ruled out "a quarrel between the past and the present."

He made it plain he wanted no disunity to result from attacks on former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who still is a cabinet member.

He clamped the lid on debate today; that may come, he assured Commons, in Thursday's secret session, and "our dangerous foe" will not hear it.

Then he struck the balance sheet, for and against invasion.

Some Troops Still in France

Seven-eighths of the troops sent to France, or 350,000 out of 400,000, are safely home, he said. Others still are fighting with the French.

"A great mass" of munitions was saved, too.

"Much disappointed," Canadians who were actually landed in France are back in England, Churchill asserted, "with all their artillery and equipment." They will now defend their mother country, he said.

Only a hostile army "on a very large scale" — transported by sea, continually maintained with munitions and supplies—could successfully invade England, the prime minister went on.

"After all," Churchill reminded the nation, "we have a navy." The Germans, he said, "have only a couple of heavy ships worth speaking of."

Although he conceded the possibility of parachute-troop raids and "attempted descents by airborne soldiers," he said the Germans could not attempt aerial invasion on a large scale, "beyond the capacity of our ground forces to crush speedily," until Britain's air force is overpowered.

"The great question is: can we break Hitler's air weapon?" His answer was: "in these islands," the British could do even better than the three or four to one ratio of planes destroyed which he claimed for the Royal Air Force at Dunkerque.

Britain's fighter strength, he said, "is stronger at the present time relatively to the German, which has suffered terrible losses, than it has ever been."

Churchill conceded there "certainly" would be German bombings of England "very soon" and retaliation against "the military targets in Germany without intermission."

He concluded:

"Let us brace ourselves to our duty and so bear ourselves so that if the British commonwealth and empire last for a thousand years, men will still say: 'this was their finest hour.'"

Nazi Troops Move To East Prussia

LONDON, June 18 (AP)—Reuters, a British news agency, reported in a dispatch from Kaunas, Lithuania, tonight that German troop movements were being carried out in East Prussia.

Additional Soviet Russian troops, including motorized units, have been arriving in Lithuania for the past four days.

Several buildings in Kaunas, the Lithuanian capital, have been requisitioned for Soviet military authorities.

Russia moved in on Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, her three little Baltic neighbors strategically near to East Prussia, after alleging they were engaged in a military alliance contrary to the "mutual assistance" pacts she exacted from them last autumn.

About 500,000 Russian troops have been reported already in the three countries."

Willkie Says U. S. Must Not Enter War

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie declared today that "despite our whole-hearted sympathy for the Allied cause, we must stay out of war."

"No man has the right to use the great powers of the presidency to lead the people, indirectly, into war," he added. "Only the people through their elected representatives can make that awful decision—and there is no question as to their decision."

Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation and candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, told a luncheon meeting sponsored by the Young Republican club of Brooklyn that he had no political manager, no campaign fund, no campaign headquarters and that he was—and would be—obligated to no one except the American people.

Weakened French Troops Fighting Desperate Battle

Continue in Action against Drive of German Hordes

By The Associated Press

BORDEAUX, France, June 18.—The unconquered French clung fiercely to their fields and hills today in desperate engagements along a broken front, fighting on under orders of the man who asked the foe for peace and now awaits reply.

In an order of the day, as dramatic in its way as his World War order to defend Verdun with courage and valor, Premier Marshal Henri Philippe Petain calmly told the men in the field to carry on against the Nazi invader.

The order went out by radio. It included all the men of the French air service and all the man of the fleet, which is under virtual command of the British.

Await Word from Hitler

And while the weary Polius, in weakened infantry regiments, artillery and tank sections, strove to keep the enemy back, the French cabinet waited for word of the fateful conference of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini at Munich — the conference which will probably decide the fate of France and her colonial empire.

The order to continue resistance against Germany went out in the name of Generalissimo Maxine Weygand as well as Petain's.

"It is the duty of all to continue resistance," they said.

There had come to Bordeaux various reports that the German troops, making contact with the fading French armies, had advanced carrying white flags—a form of strategy designed to make the French think an armistice already was in effect.

"All French and Allied combatant on land, sea and in the air are notified that no armistice and no suspension of fighting have occurred," said Premier Marshal Petain's order. "Negotiations are the only thing that has been planned and they have not yet commenced."

Study Military Situation

The morning meeting of the cabinet lasted two hours, and the members were reported studying the diplomatic and military situation, and problems of supplies.

The French had sought, through Petain, "peace with honor."

But peace was far from the fields as the German legions plunged southward with their speedy motorized units. There was heavy fighting in the region of Orleans, on the Loire, scene of Joan of Arc's greatest military triumph, and at La Charite Sur Loire, the latter a full 120 miles southeast of Paris.

(The Germans reported taking Orleans).

In the region of Dijon and Autun, east of the Loire, from 150 to 175 miles southeast of Paris, the French tried to halt the advance of Hitler's mechanized forces.

Valuation of Ferry Company Is Fixed

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP)—Despite a vigorous protest from counsel for the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry company, the Public Service Commission affirmed today an order setting the fair value of the ferry property, for rate-making purposes, at 1,023,210.

Philip B. Perlman, company attorney who earlier accused the commission of completely disregarding testimony in the case, announced the order would be appealed to the courts.

On May 29, the commission issued a ruling establishing the valuation, providing for a six per cent return on the investment, and ordering a reduction of about thirty per cent in ferry passenger fares.

In a two-hour oral objection, marked frequently by thorough hammering on counsel's desk, Perlman heatedly told commissioners Stewart Purcell and Edmund Budnitz the commission had "wittingly or unwittingly" done the company a "grave injustice."

France Cities of 20,000 Are Declared "Open"

BORDEAUX, France, June 18. (AP)—Charles Pomaret, minister of the interior, announced tonight the French government had declared all cities with populations of more than 20,000 "open cities" to save them from bombardment as Paris was spared.

been bombed, although three big German seaplanes had flown over amid a hail of anti-aircraft fire.

The British took the withdrawal hard. Here and there some sang "tiperrerary," but most faces reflected bewilderment.

"We stood them (the Germans) off every place we fought them," said a grizzled sergeant-major of infantry. "Then the French would give way on one flank or the other and we'd have to fall back."

One British division, thinned by casualties, had to hold 10,000 yards (more than six miles) of line with less than 8,000 men against five German divisions (about 15,000 in each.)

Republicans Plan Strong Opposition To Entering War

But Platform Will Declare for Material Assistance to the Allies

By RICHARD L. TURNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 18 (AP)—Obviously heading toward a platform declaration for material assistance to the Allies and against any American involvement in the war, the Republican Resolutions committee today placed Alf M. Landon, 1936 presidential nominee at the head of the subcommittee appointed to consider the subject.

To the chairmanship of the "drafting committee," which was described as a "clearing house" for all subcommittee activities, it named former Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania.

Anti-War Plank Likely

Earlier it heard an address by Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the committee which drew up a party platform last February, in which he asserted the Republican party would, he was confident, "stand for keeping us free from this war."

"Yet," he added, "we must keep the party sterile of a blind type of isolationism. Let's find out where we can make our greatest contribution to democracy. That contribution does not lie on the battle field."

Dr. Frank urged, however, that the United States "extend the utmost in material assistance to the democracies abroad." Sharply criticizing the policies of the Roosevelt administration, he said that the president's Charlottesville, Va., speech charging Italy with thrusting a dagger in the back of a neighbor constituted an "informal and personal declaration of war."

Discuss Principal Issues

The Resolutions committee met in executive session through the afternoon discussing labor, reciprocal trade, and the agricultural issues.

"We are going to present to the American people a short, direct statement of principles that can not be mistaken by the people, with the purpose in mind to wrest human need from political greed in this country," said Herbert K. Hyde, chairman of the Resolutions committee.

"The first duty is to set our house in order. The job of recovery is the recovery of jobs, to release capital and thus put idle people mills, shops and mines to work to create new wealth and thus bring prosperity to the people.

Democracy Called Corpse by Minister

FREDERICK, Md., June 18 (AP)—Democracy was characterized today as "too much a corpse—a body without a soul" by the Rev. Dr. Lawrence E. Bair, of the Evangelical and Reformed Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa.

He delivered the opening address at the annual conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Potomac Synod of Evangelical and Reformed church, held at Hood College.

Dr. Bair said it was the function of the Woman's Missionary Society and of the church to try to put a soul into the body of democracy.

"There can be no democracy without Christianity and the realization of the fatherhood of God," he asserted.

The speaker said there can be no totalitarianism without atheism. "If we have failed," he added, "we have failed because we had no gospel and were not co-workers with God."

Sessions opened Monday and will be concluded tomorrow.

from Point Barrow to Tierra Del Fuega."

Where the Money Went

Johnson also called attention to the question of why "our equipment is far in arrears" although the total appropriated for all military purposes since 1930 was slightly more than $4,500,000,000.

Approximately half of that amount, he said, was used to pay the personnel, with the most of the balance used for food, clothing, training, shelter, maintenance, repair and similar items.

"During the past ten years, a total of only about one quarter of a billion dollars has been allotted to the purchase of new equipment," he related. "Nearly half of this sum was not made available until July 1, 1939. Modern armies cannot be created with such limited funds in such little time."

He reported that the American soldier received a minimum of $21 a month while an unnamed European government paid its soldiers only sixty-five cents a month.

plotted to overthrow the government.

Armored German Columns Fail To Break French Lines in Jura Area

BASEL, Switzerland, June 18 (AP)—Armored German columns tried to slice the reorganized French army on the southern Jura mountains tonight to clasp hands with Italians in the Alps, but failed to get through.

Panzer tanks and armored car units, convoyed by motorcycle machine-gunners, tested the new French line, and found it strong.

They withdrew slightly to await reinforcements before tackling the new right wing of the French army "fighting for honor of the flag."

To reach the Italians, the Germans will have to drive 100 miles in a circuitous route around Geneva.

In this new line along Saint Point lake, source of the Doubs river in the heart of the Jura range fringing Switzerland, are units of the 450,000 Maginot fortress troops who escaped the Nazi's Alsace-Lorraine trap by slipping behind a thin screen of Alpine chasseurs who yesterday ended a desperate thirty-six hour rearguard stand.

These are not war-weary forces from the Flanders fire, but comparatively fresh troops who saw months of inaction in France's Maginot line.

The Nazis apparently had captured 50,000 to 100,000, leaving 400,000 or more of the 1,000,000 Maginot linesmen still surrounded or trying to cut their way out.

The French troops at Saint Point dynamited the four-mile long railroad tunnel under Golden mountain which emerges in Switzerland. This apparently was a move to prevent their new positions just south of Pontalier from being surprised from the rear.

The fortress men stopped the German stabs with heavy fire of famous 75s, and with antiaircraft guns dismantled from the Maginot fortresses and now used as anti-tank guns.

The French said they had brought with them all the munitions stored in the underground forts which they could load on trucks and private cars.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Munich, the city of tragic memory for Czecho-Slovakia, again became the center of world attention as Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini sat down there once more, this time to dictate the fate of France.

Yet it was elsewhere that events were shaping which could nullify ultimately the significance of Munich, today or yesterday; could turn the fruits of victory to ashes in the mouths of the Italo-German axis partners.

French defeat is an accomplished fact. France herself is destroyed; but her vast overseas possessions that span the world are out of German or Italian reach unless and until the axis can win what Britain's stormy war leader, Winston Churchill, has dubbed the "battle of Britain."

Much Depends upon Fleet

Unless Britain's navy is vanquished, Munich can symbolize only another episode of the war. The Hitlerian triumphs on the continent that have crushed nine nations into submission by threats or force can have no semblance of permanency while British sea-power dominates the oceans that wash that continent, and Russia hovers in the east, an uncertain factor.

Churchill put it to parliament in a nutshell. The beginning battle of Britain, he indicated, would be the final test of air power versus sea power.

"Can we break Hitler's air weapon?" he asked.

That is the paramount question—a question that overshadows the Hitler-Mussolini terms of victory over France even before those terms are known.

Days and nights of anguish lie ahead for England; but hope is not dead for her while her fleet can keep the high seas open. The material resources of the world outside the continent of Europe are hers to call on.

Russia Is Puzzle

There can be no question that the victors, intent upon liquidating beaten France at Munich, fully recognize the fact. Nor can there be much doubt that, amid all the tumult of adulation at Munich, both Hitler and Mussolini cast puzzled glances over their shoulders at Russia from time to time.

What lies behind Russia's moves to tighten her hold on the Baltic states is still to be disclosed. Whatever the Moscow design, Russia has trebly armed her Baltic common front with her Nazi "friend" at a moment when Germany's exulting armies are scattered far over Norway, Denmark, the low countries, France, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria.

There are hints that heroic little Finland is soon to receive, if she has not already received, new Moscow demands. Control of the Gulf of Bothnia, as well as the Gulf of Finland, is reported to be Russian aim in the west. If that is true it cannot help but be a disturbing circumstance for Germany.

Menace to Germany

Established in the Gulf of Bothnia, between Finland and Sweden, Russia would be a potential menace to one of two vital German resources, iron ore from northern Sweden. In the Balkans, Russia has mustered additional forces along the Bessarabian border of Rumania. There and in Poland, which she shares with Germany, she could jeopardize oil supplies vital to the Reich's economy.

From the moment of the German drive into Norway and Denmark, there have been distinct signs that Russian enthusiasm for Hitler Germany has cooled.

Stunning as have been Germany's victories in the west, her eastern flank is still her most vulnerable economic front. Whatever Russia's purpose, her new moves in the Baltic raise another note of doubt as to final outcome of the struggle for mastery of Europe.

"No!"

He invited all French officers and men in Britain "who may arrive here with or without arms," engineers and skilled armaments workers to "get in touch with me."

Authoritative London circles said General de Gaulle was "undoubtedly underlining an opinion strongly held and supported in France and Britain—that France could and should fight on."

It was added that the broadcast should not be considered as encouraging a separatist movement in France.

Lochner Describes German Occupation Of City of Paris

Correspondent Told June 10 That Nazis Would Arrive June 15

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

PARIS, June 18 (By plane Courier to Berlin) (AP)—I can now disclose that we correspondents were told on June 10, five days after Fuehrer Hitler started the battle of France, that the German army would be in Paris on June 15.

It was on June 15 that General Kurt von Briesen, cousin of a Milwaukee (Wis.) attorney, Ernest von Briesen, reviewed his division victoriously marching down the Champs Elysees and past the Arc de Triomphe and the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Von Briesen, with his staff, reviewed from horseback the division which first obtained fame in the battle of Kutno, biggest battle of the Polish war.

"They've fought on fifty battlefields since the beginning of the war," he said of his goose-stepping soldiers. "They are sculpted from the best German oak."

The Paris population, naturally, did not turn out to see this parade of their conquerors. Only a few gapers stood along the streets.

When we visited the tomb of the unknown soldier again Sunday, we found traces of France's tragedy symbolized anew by a bouquet of red, white and blue flowers, deposited there overnight.

Black crepe was attached to it.

On the first Sunday of the German occupation thousands of persons who had been in hiding jammed the boulevards.

The famed Cafe De La Paix had only half of its terrace open, but that was filled by nearly 100 French civilians sipping apertifs.

Among them were scattered fourteen German officers drinking black coffee. A German motorized column was parked on the boulevard in front of the cafe.

Paris police, working under German orders, passed from house to house taking a census to find out how many of the city's 3,000,000 population remained. It is believed nearly 1,000,000 still are here.

There are no mail deliveries, and change is running short, but all public services continue to function. There is plenty of food and drink. German money is being accepted in stores at the rate of twenty francs to one mark. Prices appear stable.

Two newspapers, Le Matin and Le Journal Des Debates, Nationalist and Conservative newspapers, resumed publication late today.

Rumored Roosevelt Asked to Mediate

Germans Forging Ahead in France; Ready for British

Berlin Newspaper Predicts Defeat of the "Main Enemy"

BERLIN, June 18 (AP)—Striking on against broken France, the German military experts tonight declared that "fighting can be stopped only when the armistice is signed."

The German press threatfully added that Britain would be next.

"The military collapse of France is swiftly progressing under the pressure of our relentless pursuit," said the high command.

"England," said the newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, "now stands completely alone. This is the reality of the hour in which Hitler and Mussolini sit together in Munich as representatives of the Europe of tomorrow."

Said the news service Dienst Aus Deutschland:

"There is no reason to doubt that after crushing France all measures are being pursued by the Germans in order to apply all available military weapons of force against England—originally designated as the main enemy."

But without reference to Munich, the high command showed how the German drive in the West was going on unabated.

These were among the recent German successes claimed:

The river Loire reached from Orleans to Nevers.

The Orne river crossed at several points between Caen on the Channel coast and Le Mans.

France's great armament works at Le Cruesot—her Ruhr district—seized.

The elaborate Maginot line defenses being pulled apart from all sides, after being severed yesterday from the rest of France by a German wedge reaching to the Swiss border.

The capture of 100,000 prisoners in yesterday's operations was claimed.

Among the war material seized at Nevers, it was said, were more than 100 tanks including six 70-tonners.

The German air force likewise has been busy, claiming its biggest success to date in a raid on a concentration of Allied shipping in the Loire estuary.

The high command listed nine big transports, totaling 170,000 tons, and a number of warships and smaller merchantmen as hit.

Although the command gave no figure for the total tonnage sunk or affected, authorized sources estimated that more than 800,000 tons were "damaged or sunk."

Thames Estuary Is Bombed by Nazis in Bold Night Raid

Anti-Aircraft Fire Described as Terrific; British Retaliate

LONDON, June 19 (Wednesday) (AP)—German air raiders dropped high explosives and incendiary bombs at three points along the Thames estuary gateway to London and near an east coast town and a Norfolk town last night and early today as air raid alarms kept up a continuous din along the east central coast.

Watchers in East Anglia, which includes Essex and Norfolk counties, let out a roar of cheers when they saw a German bomber plummet to earth and crash in the flaming climax of a brightly searchlighted sky-fight with a British fighter. Four Nazi bombers were shot down.

People for miles around could see the battle in the glare of searchlights which held the raider until it struck the earth.

Hundreds of searchlights flashed on at the first alarm, and caught several planes which twisted and turned in the beams as the curtain of fire crept up on them.

Anti-aircraft batteries were in almost continuous action for more than two hours.

Anti-aircraft guns kept up a drumfire against the Thames estuary raiders aiming their bombs at crowded docks and vital shipping. The thunder of exploding bombs continued until after midnight despite the rain of anti-aircraft shells.

Planes were heard over many towns, and air raid sirens shrieked.

What appeared to be flares were dropped by planes before explosions shook houses in Norfolk.

Houses were shaken also by bombs near the east coast town.

An indication that British airmen were repaying the attacks was seen in the sudden silencing of the Bremen and Hamburg radio stations.. Reuters, British news agency, said the stations went off the air for the second successive night without explanation.

The shut-down of broadcasting stations in Germany usually indicates the approach of Allied raiders who could ride the radio beams to their targets.

The air ministry announced today that the Royal Air Force inflicted heavy damage in raids on military objectives at Hamburg last night.

An Iowa poultry dealer was charged with fraud because, it was claimed, he hypodermically injected water into his chickens so as to make them weigh more when they were sold.

Holt Charges FDR Stirs Up Hatred Of Hitler, Duce

McCarran Also Accuses President of Warlike Attitude

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP)—Declaring that the Roosevelt administration had stirred up hatred and that only a "spark" was needed to plunge the nation into war, Senator Holt (D.-W. Va.) blocked immediate action today on a resolution empowering the President to send Red Cross "mercy ships" into war zones.

"This little innocent resolution might be the spark that would send thousands of American boys to their death," Holt boomed, his face blanched with emotion.

"I shall raise my voice to object to creating incidents when this country is ripe for somebody to set off the dynamite in order to cover up the failures of the past."

Previously, Senator McCarran (D.-Nev.), said that the United States faced an emergency —"an emergency which was created, I am sorry to say, by some expressions which were uttered by the head of this government not very long ago, which aroused the hatred of foreign countries at war."

McCarran Alarmed

The westerner warned that because of this hatred "everything possible may be done to throw us over the precipice into war."

McCarran did not state whether he referred to President Roosevelt's remarks, when Italy joined Germany in the war against the Allies, that the "hand that held the dagger struck it into its neighbor's back."

"It was an unfortunate thing, an unhappy event," McCarran said. "I think that is recognized throughout the length and breadth of America today."

Holt was able to block consideration of the resolution because Chairman Pittman (D.-Nev.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had asked unanimous consent to put aside the tax bill, which was the pending business.

Barred From Combat Zones

Pittman explained that the neutrality act prohibited Red Cross vessels from entering combat zones unless granted safe conduct by all belligerents. He said the U. S. McKeesport, chartered by the Red Cross and loaded with $500,000 of food and medical supplies, left this country two days ago for Bordeaux, France.

Germany and Italy had been unable to give full assurances of safe conduct, Pittman continued, while it was impossible to communicate with some of the belligerents, Belgium, Norway and Holland. Pittman said the ship had been ordered to Bilboa, Spain, but it was not certain the supplies could reach France from there.

"Just let one ship be sunk with the American flag on the masthead and the Red Cross on the side and every red-blooded American would rush into this holocaust of hell," McCarran said. "We have no place there."

Holt Backs McCarran

Holt agreed with McCarran and added that the war sentiment included "some high officials of this country who have charge of determining the destination of the vessels."

"Newspapers and radio commentators say that the President is discussing with persons at the White House the question of whether or not he can have a declaration of war," Holt shouted. "I realize it may not be wise to say what I am saying, but I believe it. As long as I have a voice in this body I shall raise it against any chances of provoking an incident by which we can be drawn into war."

The West Virginia senator said that if "this particular vessel should be sunk, and if the proper kind of propaganda should lay the sinking at the door of Germany, immediately the flames of hatred would break out which have been generated by men high in this administration and generated on the floor of the Senate by war mongering speeches."

Standard Form for Reporting Accidents

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP) — A standard form for reporting all accidents will be used by the commissioner of motor vehicles, the state and Baltimore city police, the Maryland Traffic Safety Committee announced today.

E. R. McShane, executive secretary of the committee, said the reports "will eanble all interested departments to be in constant touch with locations showing high accident frequency together with all pertinent information of the causes."

The standardized reports will give "the traffic-planner a better opportunity to plan preventive measures," McShane added.

The report will contain the names of drvers involved in accidents and other pertinent informafion, he explained. The standrdized forms were adopted as the result of studies made by Holger Jensen, chairman of the statistical committee.

Stimson Would Throw Our Ports Open To British and French Navy Ships

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 18 (AP)—Henry L. Stimson, secretary of state during the Hoover administration, tonight advocated that the United States "throw open all our ports to the British and French naval and merchant marine for all repairs, refueling and other services."

In a speech broadcast nationally Stimson declared successive air attacks on naval bases in Great Britain might force its fleet from the Atlantic and deprive it of power.

"On the other hand," he continued, "if assured of our supplies, and of the use of our bases, it could in all probability continue to command that ocean and our own fleet could devote itself to holding the Pacific against the manifest dangers which may face us there."

Urges Cooperation

He contended the United States Navy and Maritime forces of France and Britain should work in "harmonious cooperation."

"We should not be compelled helplessly to await attack," Stimson asserted, "while a powerful aggressor chose his own opportunity."

Stimson recommended also that the United States repeal provisions of "our ill-starred so-called neutrality venture, accelerate by every means the sending of planes and other munitions to Britain and France, if necessary in our own ships and under convoy."

"We should at once adopt a system of universal compulsory training and service which would not only be the most potent evidence that we are in earnest but which is at the present moment imperative if we are to have men ready to operate the planes and other munitions, the creation of which Congress has just authorized by a practically unanimous vote."

Believes Hitler Bluffing

Stimson said America "should not be fooled by the evident bluff of Hitler's so-called fifth-column movements in South America."

"They are, on the face of them," attempts to frighten us from sending help where it will be most affective," he said. "We should combat the defeatist arguments which are being made in this country as to the unconquerable power of Germany.

"I believe that if we use our brains and curb our prejudices we can, by keeping command of the sea, beat her again as we did in 1918."

Churchill Calls

in the hour of French military collapse, the prime minister "cast up a dread balance sheet."

Tonight, after visiting King George VI, Churchill repeated the main points of his speech in a broadcast which was relayed to the United States.

With supreme sureness he proclaimed the beginning of "the battle of England."

He counted off Britain's men under arms: more than 1,250,000 regulars, 500,000 local defense volunteers; Canadian armies on England's soil.

Praises British Navy

He said the navy could drown an invading force in the channel or blow it to pieces as it tried to land.

He exulted in the remaining, if outnumbered strength of the British air force; disclosed the "painful decision" to withhold Britain's full metropolitan fighting plane strength from France and added:

"We are now assured of immense continued and increased support in munitions of all kinds from the United States and especially of airplanes and pilots from across the ocean."

Churchill made two predictions.

"If we can stand up to him (Hitler)," he said, "all Europe may be freed and the life of the world may move forward into broad, sunlit uplands . . .

"But if we fail, the whole world, including the United States x x x will sink into the abyss of a new dark age made more sinster and perhaps more prolonged by the lights of a perverted science."

Urges French To Fight On

Even while he admitted "the battle of France" was lost, Churchill urged the French to fight on, to sign no separate peace.

The French, he said, have "not yet" stopped fighting. "We do not know yet what will happen in France or whether French resistance will be prolonged both in France and in the French empire overseas."

The British, he went on, cannot feel able to free France from her treaty obligations to fight on to the end with Britain; "the French government," he said, "will be throwing away great opportunities and casting away their future if they do not continue the war..."

As for Mussolini, Churchill dismissed him with a taunt:

"We are told," he said, "that the Italian navy is coming to gain sea superiority in these waters . . . if that is seriously intended, I can only say we shall be delighted to offer Mussolini free, safeguarded passage through the straits of Gibraltar, in order that he may play the part he aspires to do . . .

Belittle Italians

"There is a general curiosity in the British fleet to find out whether the Italians are up to the level they were in the last war or whether they have fallen off."

He gave no hint of the future of the French fleet, which has operated under British general command since the war started, but in the House of Lords Viscount Caldecote said he was confident the French would seek to "remove every hindrance" to continuation of the struggle by their British ally.

Moreover, French sources in London said they considered it "probable" that the French near east and African armies would keep up resistance, with air and naval forces operating from British bases, and government representatives established in England.

Churchill disclosed that only three British divisions were able to stand in line in the battle of France with the French; that the battle was lost before more could be re-equipped and transported, after the disaster of Flanders.

He spoke strongly against recriminations over this; he refused to accept "distinctions" between members of the present government; he ruled out "a quarrel between the past and the present."

He made it plain he wanted no disunity to result from attacks on former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who still is a cabinet member.

He clamped the lid on debate today; that may come, he assured Commons, in Thursday's secret session, and "our dangerous foe" will not hear it.

Then he struck the balance sheet, for and against invasion.

Some Troops Still in France

Seven-eighths of the troops sent to France, or 350,000 out of 400,000, are safely home, he said. Others still are fighting with the French.

"A great mass" of munitions was saved, too.

"Much disappointed," Canadians who were actually landed in France are back in England, Churchill asserted, "with all their artillery and equipment." They will now defend their mother country, he said.

Only a hostile army "on a very large scale" — transported by sea, continually maintained with munitions and supplies—could successfully invade England, the prime minister went on.

"After all," Churchill reminded the nation, "we have a navy." The Germans, he said, "have only a couple of heavy ships worth speaking of."

Although he conceded the possibility of parachute-troop raids and "attempted descents by airborne soldiers," he said the Germans could not attempt aerial invasion on a large scale, "beyond the capacity of our ground forces to crush speedily," until Britain's air force is overpowered.

"The great question is: can we break Hitler's air weapon?" His answer was: "in these islands," the British could do even better than the three or four to one ratio of planes destroyed which he claimed for the Royal Air Force at Dunkerque.

Britain's fighter strength, he said, "is stronger at the present time relatively to the German, which has suffered terrible losses, than it has ever been."

Churchill conceded there "certainly" would be German bombings of England "very soon" and retaliation against "the military targets in Germany without intermission."

He concluded:

"Let us brace ourselves to our duty and so bear ourselves so that if the British commonwealth and empire last for a thousand years, men will still say: 'this was their finest hour.'"

Nazi Troops Move To East Prussia

LONDON, June 18 (AP)—Reuters, a British news agency, reported in a dispatch from Kaunas, Lithuania, tonight that German troop movements were being carried out in East Prussia.

Additional Soviet Russian troops, including motorized units, have been arriving in Lithuania for the past four days.

Several buildings in Kaunas, the Lithuanian capital, have been requisitioned for Soviet military authorities.

Russia moved in on Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, her three little Baltic neighbors strategically near to East Prussia, after alleging they were engaged in a military alliance contrary to the "mutual assistance" pacts she exacted from them last autumn.

About 500,000 Russian troops have been reported already in the three countries."

Willkie Says U. S. Must Not Enter War

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie declared today that "despite our whole-hearted sympathy for the Allied cause, we must stay out of war."

"No man has the right to use the great powers of the presidency to lead the people, indirectly, into war," he added. "Only the people through their elected representatives can make that awful decision—and there is no question as to their decision."

Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation and candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, told a luncheon meeting sponsored by the Young Republican club of Brooklyn that he had no political manager, no campaign fund, no campaign headquarters and that he was—and would be—obligated to no one except the American people.

Valuation of Ferry Company Is Fixed

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP)—Despite a vigorous protest from counsel for the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry company, the Public Service Commission affirmed today an order setting the fair value of the ferry property, for rate-making purposes, at 1,023,210.

Philip B. Perlman, company attorney who earlier accused the commission of completely disregarding testimony in the case, announced the order would be appealed to the courts.

On May 29, the commission issued a ruling establishing the valuation, providing for a six per cent return on the investment, and ordering a reduction of about thirty per cent in ferry passenger fares.

In a two-hour oral objection, marked frequently by thorough hammering on counsel's desk, Perlman heatedly told commissioners Stewart Purcell and Edmund Budnitz the commission had 'wittingly or unwittingly' done the company a "grave injustice."

France Cities of 20,000 Are Declared "Open"

BORDEAUX, France, June 18. (AP)—Charles Pomaret, minister of the interior announced tonight the French government had declared all cities with populations of more than 20,000 "open cities" to save them from bombardment as Paris was spared.

been bombed, although three big German seaplanes had flown over amid a hail of anti-aircraft fire.

The British took the withdrawal hard. Here and there some sang "tiperrerary," but most faces reflected bewilderment.

"We stood them (the Germans) off every place we fought them," said a grizzled sergeant-major of infantry. "Then the French would give way on one flank or the other and we'd have to fall back."

One British division, thinned by casualties, had to hold 10,000 yards (more than six miles) of line with less than 8,000 men against five German divisions (about 15,000 in each.)

Weakened French Troops Fighting Desperate Battle

Continue in Action against Drive of German Hordes

By The Associated Press

BORDEAUX, France, June 18.—The unconquered French clung fiercely to their fields and hills today in desperate engagements along a broken front, fighting on under orders of the man who asked the foe for peace and now awaits reply.

In an order of the day, as dramatic in its way as his World War order to defend Verdun with courage and valor, Premier Marshal Henri Philippe Petain calmly told the men in the field to carry on against the Nazi invader.

The order went out by radio. It included all the men of the French air service and all the man of the fleet, which is under virtual command of the British.

Await Word from Hitler

And while the weary Poilus, in weakened infantry regiments, artillery and tank sections, strove to keep the enemy back, the French cabinet waited for word of the fateful conference of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini at Munich — the conference which will probably decide the fate of France and her colonial empire.

The order to continue resistance against Germany went out in the name of Generalissimo Maxine Weygand as well as Petain's.

"It is the duty of all to continue resistance," they said.

There had come to Bordeaux various reports that the German troops, making contact with the fading French armies, had advanced carrying white flags—a form of strategy designed to make the French think an armistice already was in effect.

"All French and Allied combatant on land, sea and in the air are notified that no armistice and no suspension of fighting have occurred," said Premier Marshal Petain's order. "Negotiations are the only thing that has been planned and they have not yet commenced."

Study Military Situation

The morning meeting of the cabinet lasted two hours, and the members were reported studying the diplomatic and military situation, and problems of supplies.

The French had sought, through Petain, "peace with honor."

But peace was far from the fields as the German legions plunged southward with their speedy motorized units. There was heavy fighting in the region of Orleans, on the Loire, scene of Joan of Arc's greatest military triumph, and at La Charite Sur Loire, the latter a full 120 miles southeast of Paris.

(The Germans reported taking Orleans).

In the region of Dijon and Autun, east of the Loire, from 150 to 175 miles southeast of Paris, the French tried to halt the advance of Hitler's mechanized forces.

Republicans Plan Strong Opposition To Entering War

But Platform Will Declare for Material Assistance to the Allies

By RICHARD L. TURNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 18 (AP)—Obviously heading toward a platform declaration for material assistance to the Allies and against any American involvement in the war, the Republican Resolutions committee today placed Alf M. Landon, 1936 presidential nominee at the head of the subcommittee appointed to consider the subject.

To the chairmanship of the "drafting committee," which was described as a "clearing house" for all subcommittee activities, it named former Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania.

Anti-War Plank Likely

Earlier it heard an address by Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the committee which drew up a party platform last February, in which he asserted the Republican party would, he was confident, "stand for keeping us free from this war."

"Yet," he added, "we must keep the party sterile of a blind type of isolationism. Let's find out where we can make our greatest contribution to democracy. That contribution does not lie on the battle field."

Dr. Frank urged, however, that the United States "extend the utmost in material assistance to the democracies abroad." Sharply criticizing the policies of the Roosevelt administration, he said that the president's Charlottesville, Va., speech charging Italy with thrusting a dagger in the back of a neighbor constituted an "informal and personal declaration of war."

Discuss Principal Issues

The Resolutions committee met in executive session through the afternoon discussing labor, reciprocal trade, and the agricultural issues.

"We are going to present to the American people a short, direct statement of principles that can not be mistaken by the people, with the purpose in mind to wrest human need from political greed in this country," said Herbert K. Hyde, chairman of the Resolutions committee.

"The first duty is to set our house in order. The job of recovery is the recovery of jobs, to release capital and thus put idle people mills, shops and mines to work to create new wealth and thus bring prosperity to the people.

Democracy Called Corpse by Minister

FREDERICK, Md., June 18 (AP)—Democracy was characterized today as "too much a corpse—a body without a soul" by the Rev. Dr. Lawrence E. Bair, of the Evangelical and Reformed Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa.

He delivered the opening address at the annual conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Potomac Synod of Evangelical and Reformed church, held at Hood College.

Dr. Bair said it was the function of the Woman's Missionary Society and of the church to try to put a soul into the body of democracy.

"There can be no democracy without Christianity and the realization of the fatherhood of God," he asserted.

The speaker said there can be no totalitarianism without atheism. "If we have failed," he added, "we have failed because we had no gospel and were not co-workers with God."

Sessions opened Monday and will be concluded tomorrow.

from Point Barrow to Tierra Del Fuega."

Where the Money Went

Johnson also called attention to the question of why "our equipment is far in arrears" although the total appropriated for all military purposes since 1930 was slightly more than $4,500,000,000.

Approximately half of that amount, he said, was used to pay the personnel, with the most of the balance used for food, clothing, training, shelter, maintenance, repair and similar items.

"During the past ten years, a total of only about one quarter of a billion dollars has been allotted to the purchase of new equipment," he related. "Nearly half of this sum was not made available until July 1, 1939. Modern armies cannot be created with such limited funds in such little time."

He reported that the American soldier received a minimum of $21 a month while an unnamed European government paid its soldiers only sixty-five cents a month.

plotted to overthrow the government.

Armored German Columns Fail To Break French Lines in Jura Area

BASEL, Switzerland, June 18 (AP)—Armored German columns tried to slice the reorganized French army on the southern Jura mountains tonight to clasp hands with Italians in the Alps, but failed to get through.

Panzer tanks and armored car units, convoyed by motorcycle machine-gunners, tested the new French line, and found it strong.

They withdrew slightly to await reinforcements before tackling the new right wing of the French army "fighting for honor of the flag."

To reach the Italians, the Germans will have to drive 100 miles in a circuitous route around Geneva.

In this new line along Saint Point lake, source of the Doubs river in the heart of the Jura range fringing Switzerland, are units of the 450,000 Maginot fortress troops who escaped the Nazi's Alsace-Lorraine trap by slipping behind a thin screen of Alpine chasseurs who yesterday ended a desperate thirty-six hour rearguard stand.

These are not war-weary forces from the Flanders fire, but comparatively fresh troops who saw months of inaction in France's Maginot line.

The Nazis apparently had captured 50,000 to 100,000, leaving 400,000 or more of the 1,000,000 Maginot linesmen still surrounded or trying to cut their way out.

The French troops at Saint Point dynamited the four-mile long railroad tunnel under Golden mountain which emerges in Switzerland. This apparently was a move to prevent their new positions just south of Pontalier from being surprised from the rear.

The fortress men stopped the German stabs with heavy fire of famous 75s, and with antiaircraft guns dismantled from the Maginot fortresses and now used as anti-tank guns.

The French said they had brought with them all the munitions stored in the underground forts which they could load on trucks and private cars.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

Associated Press Staff Writer

Munich, the city of tragic memory for Czecho-Slovakia, again became the center of world attention as Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini sat down there once more, this time to dictate the fate of France.

Yet it was elsewhere that events were shaping which could nullify ultimately the significance of Munich, today or yesterday; could turn the fruits of victory to ashes in the mouths of the Italo-German axis partners.

French defeat is an accomplished fact. France herself is destroyed; but her vast overseas possessions that span the world are out of German or Italian reach unless and until the axis can win what Britain's stormy war leader, Winston Churchill, has dubbed the "battle of Britain."

Much Depends upon Fleet

Unless Britain's navy is vanquished, Munich can symbolize only another episode of the war. The Hitlerian triumphs on the continent that have crushed nine nations into submission by threats or force can have no semblance of permanency while British sea-power dominates the oceans that wash that continent, and Russia hovers in the east, an uncertain factor.

Churchill put it to parliament in a nutshell. The beginning battle of Britain, he indicated, would be the final test of air power versus sea power.

"Can we break Hitler's air weapon?" he asked.

That is the paramount question—a question that overshadows the Hitler-Mussolini terms of victory over France even before those terms are known.

Days and nights of anguish lie ahead for England; but hope is not dead for her while her fleet can keep the high seas open. The material resources of the world outside the continent of Europe are hers to call on.

Russia Is Puzzle

There can be no question that the victors, intent upon liquidating beaten France at Munich, fully recognize the fact. Nor can there be much doubt that, amid all the tumult of adulation at Munich, both Hitler and Mussolini cast puzzled glances over their shoulders at Russia from time to time.

What lies behind Russia's moves to tighten her hold on the Baltic states is still to be disclosed. Whatever the Moscow design, Russia has trebly armed her Baltic common front with her Nazi "friend" at a moment when Germany's exulting armies are scattered far over Norway, Denmark, the low countries, France, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria.

There are hints that heroic little Finland is soon to receive, if she has not already received, new Moscow demands. Control of the Gulf of Bothnia, as well as the Gulf of Finland, is reported to be Russian aim in the west. If that is true it cannot help but be a disturbing circumstance for Germany.

Menace to Germany

Established in the Gulf of Bothnia, between Finland and Sweden, Russia would be a potential menace to one of two vital German resources, iron ore from northern Sweden. In the Balkans, Russia has mustered additional forces along the Bessarabian border of Rumania. There and in Poland, which she shares with Germany, she could jeopardize oil supplies vital to the Reich's economy.

From the moment of the German drive into Norway and Denmark, there have been distinct signs that Russian enthusiasm for Hitler Germany has cooled.

Stunning as have been Germany's victories in the west, her eastern flank is still her most vulnerable economic front. Whatever Russia's purpose, her new moves in the Baltic raise another note of doubt as to final outcome of the struggle for mastery of Europe.

Lochner Describes German Occupation Of City of Paris

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

PARIS, June 18 (By plane Courier to Berlin) (AP)—I can now disclose that we correspondents were told on June 10, five days atfer Fuehrer Hitler started the battle of France, that the German army would be in Paris on June 15.

It was on June 15 that General Kurt von Briesen, cousin of a Milwaukee (Wis.) attorney, Ernest von Briesen, reviewed his division victoriously marching down the Champs Elysees and past the Arc de Triomphe and the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Von Briesen, with his staff, reviewed from horseback the division which first obtained fame in the battle of Kutno, biggest battle of the Polish war.

"They've fought on fifty battlefields since the beginning of the war," he said of his goose-stepping soldiers. "They are sculpted from the best German oak."

The Paris population, naturally, did not turn out to see this parade of their conquerors. Only a few gapers stood along the streets.

When we visited the tomb of the unknown soldier again Sunday, we found traces of France's tragedy symbolized anew by a bouquet of red, white and blue flowers, deposited there overnight.

Black crepe was attached to it.

On the first Sunday of the German occupation thousands of persons who had been in hiding jammed the boulevards.

The famed Cafe De La Paix had only half of its terrace open, but that was filled by nearly 100 French civilians sipping apertifs.

Among them were scattered fourteen German officers drinking black coffee. A German motorized column was parked on the boulevard in front of the cafe.

Paris police, working under German orders, passed from house to house taking a census to find out how many of the city's 3,000,000 population remained. It is believed nearly 1,000,000 still are here.

There are no mail deliveries, and change is running short, but all public services continue to function. There is plenty of food and drink. German money is being accepted in stores at the rate of twenty francs to one mark. Prices appear stable.

Two newspapers, Le Matin and Le Journal Des Debates, Nationalist and Conservative newspapers, resumed publication late today.

Rumored Roosevelt Asked to Mediate

LONDON, June 18. (AP) — The Rome radio tonight broadcast what the announcer called an "unconfirmed rumor" that Great Britain has asked President Roosevelt to mediate with Germany and Italy to obtain "honorable peace terms" for France.

"But has the last word been said?

"No!".

He invited all French officers and men in Britain "who may arrive here with or without arms," engineers and skilled armaments workers to "get in touch with me."

Authoritative London circles said General de Gaulle was "undoubtedly underlining an opinion strongly held and supported in France and Britain—that France could and should fight on."

It was added that the broadcast should not be considered as encouraging a separatist movement in France.

Roosevelt Plans

724,480. His plan, he said, would add about 1,250,000 tons.

Just before final approval of the program, the committee wrote into the bill a provision designed to give the House a voice in disarmament treaty-making, and to prevent the sale or charter of naval vessels without the consent of Congress.

Germans Forging Ahead in France; Ready for British

Berlin Newspaper Predicts Defeat of the "Main Enemy"

BERLIN, June 18 (AP)—Striking on against broken France, the German military experts tonight declared that "fighting can be stopped only when the armistice is signed."

The German press threatfully added that Britain would be next.

"The military collapse of France is swiftly progressing under the pressure of our relentless pursuit, said the high command.

"England," said the newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, "now stands completely alone. This is the reality of the hour in which Hitler and Mussolini sit together in Munich as representatives of the Europe of tomorrow."

Said the news service Dienst Aus Deutschland:

"There is no reason to doubt that after crushing France all measures are being pursued by the Germans in order to apply all available military weapons of force against England—originally designated as the main enemy."

But without reference to Munich, the high command showed how the German drive in the West was going on unabated.

These were among the recent German successes claimed:

The river Loire reached from Orleans to Nevers.

The Orne river crossed at several points between Caen on the Channel coast and Le Mans.

France's great armament works at Le Cruesot—her Ruhr district—seized.

The elaborate Maginot line defenses being pulled apart from all sides, after being severed yesterday from the rest of France by a German wedge reaching to the Swiss border.

The capture of 100,000 prisoners in yesterday's operations was claimed.

Among the war material seized at Nevers, it was said, were more than 100 tanks including six 70-tonners.

The German air force likewise has been busy, claiming its biggest success to date in a raid on a concentration of Allied shipping in the Loire estuary.

The high command listed nine big transports, totaling 170,000 tons, and a number of warships and smaller merchantmen as hit.

Thames Estuary Is Bombed by Nazis in Bold Night Raid

Anti-Aircraft Fire Described as Terrific; British Retaliate

LONDON, June 19 (Wednesday) (AP)—German air raiders dropped high explosives and incendiary bombs at three points along the Thames estuary gateway to London and near an east coast town and a Norfolk town last night and early today as air raid alarms kept up a continuous din along the east central coast.

Watchers in East Anglia, which includes Essex and Norfolk counties, let out a roar of cheers when they saw a German bomber plummet to earth and crash in the flaming climax of a brightly searchlighted sky-fight with a British fighter. Four Nazi bombers were shot down.

People for miles around could see the battle in the glare of searchlights which held the raider until it struck the earth.

Hundreds of searchlights flashed on at the first alarm, and caught several planes which twisted and turned in the beams as the curtain of fire crept up on them.

Anti-aircraft batteries were in almost continuous action for more than two hours.

Anti-aircraft guns kept up a drumfire against the Thames estuary raiders aiming their bombs at crowded docks and vital shipping. The thunder of exploding bombs continued until after midnight despite the rain of anti-aircraft shells.

Planes were heard over many towns, and air raid sirens shrieked.

What appeared to be flares were dropped by planes before explosions shook houses in Norfolk.

Houses were shaken also by bombs near the east coast town.

An indication that British airmen were repaying the attacks was seen in the sudden silencing of the Bremen and Hamburg radio stations.. Reuters, British news agency, said the stations went off the air for the second successive night without explanation.

The shut-down of broadcasting stations in Germany usually indicates the approach of Allied raiders who could ride the radio beams to their targets.

The air ministry announced today that the Royal Air Force inflicted heavy damage in raids on military objectives at Hamburg last night.

An Iowa poultry dealer was charged with fraud because, it was claimed, he hypodermically injected water into his chickens so as to make them weigh more when they were sold.

There Were Only Two People Who Thought His Birthday Important, though Each had a Different Reason

BY JOCK CARROLL

Life began to take me away from Mother when I was 7. My chums were going to military school, and when she saw how much I wanted to go, too, she gave in.

All the time we waited for the train she kept fussing with my coat or my tie and smiling at me with those sad, brown eyes.

On the way over from the house she had told me several times to be sure to write. And there was a huge box of paper and envelopes in my grip to remind me. She kissed me and cried when the train came, and I was a bit ashamed of her in front of the fellows.

For the first few months I did write—I was lonely. Then the school began to take me in and I did not use many of the envelopes.

When I came home for the holidays she scolded me for neglecting her, but her eyes were so happy to see me that I did not feel very bad. She took me to shows and boxing matches—though she didn't like them—and gave me everything I wanted.

After that there was always some fellows at school asking a bunch to his uncle's ranch or his father's lodge for the holidays. The letters from home seemed to become more wistful, and sometimes I would be restless after reading them, but

Her lips trembled.

Mother always let me go with the fellows.

When I was 20 I secured a job in an automobile engineering laboratory. I studied hard. Mother helped me a lot during those few years I was home, encouraging me, listening to me. Then I cleaned a few bugs out of the new generator line and they sent me to the big plant in the city.

At first I came home quite often for week ends. Then it narrowed down to Christmas and Thanksgiving and my birthday. Around that time I remember, dimly, hearing Mother say that it hurt to have children growing away from you.

I didn't think of what she meant until later. When I did I had my secretary—I was going up in the world——send Mother flowers on her birthdays.

My secretary was not very imaginative. She sent Mother one dozen red roses each year. With the same neat little card.

I found them all afterward, filed away with the rest of the things Mother had kept. My letters from school. A few from the city. Then the cards. 1934—Love from Your Son. 1935—Love from Your Son. 1936. 1937. 1938.

Father passed away. I came down to visit Mother several months in a row. Then we ran into trouble in the shop and every customer started to scream at once. When we got out of it, I had met my wife-to-be, and that took up by spare time.

One thing I did keep, even after my marriage, was going home on my birthday. That was kind of special. Mother used to write me weeks ahead of time to be sure that I arranged to come. And she would prepare the big event for days, baking all the things I liked in just the way I liked them.

It was a strain on her. I remember seeing her sit down suddenly to catch her breath at times. Her hair was snow-white then, and it seemed to make her eyes sparkle, ever more brightly. She had soft, brown eyes.

The arrival of our baby boy caused me to miss my birthday party with Mother for the first time. After that there always seemed to be something cropping up that made it impossible for me to get down. And Mother didn't write to ask me any more—guess she thought it wasn't fair to be taking me away from my family.

It was the wife who finally got after me, and made me take her and the kids down to spend our summer vacation with Mother. It was wonderful—Mother fell in love with the wife and the kids. I don't think I ever saw her so radiant. She would just sit there, rocking, smiling.

The shop long-distanced me after two days of it. We were going into fall production a month ahead of time.

All the life seemed to die right out of Mother's face. She made me come and kiss her before I ran for the train. It struck me that it was the first time I had kissed her since I had left for military school. Her lips trembled.

"John," she whispered, "come back for your birthday this year, will you? Could you be sure to come?"

"Listen," I said, "nothing could keep me away." And I meant it, too.

She sat still in her rocking chair, and a little of the happiness came into her face again. At the door something made me walk back and kiss her once more. It was good to see the way her eyes brightened. She had brown and gentle eyes.

But we couldn't pull production up to schedule, and shock absorbers were so hot that I didn't even look up as my birthday came and went.

It was Doc Wagner phoned to tell me she was dead. When I got there he let me know how she had prepared for my party. Spent the whole day over a hot stove, against his orders, insisting on cooking the things I liked.

When all was ready she sat down to wait. She waited until midnight, staring out over the table with the neat pairs of knives and forks, and the candles that had burned down into the icing.

Then she went upstairs.

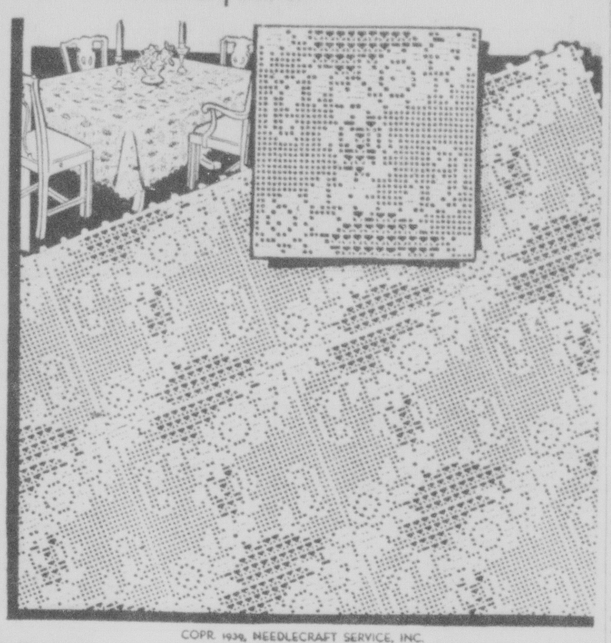

Quietly, the doctor told me. Not a murmur. He also mentioned that she had known she was going to die, back when I had the family down for the summer vacation.

"You didn't give her as much thought as you should have," Doc Wagner told me.

But I think of her often now.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Supervisor Named

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 18 (AP)—The State Soil Conservation Committee announced today that a recount of votes in the West Fork Conservation district had broken a tie between two candidates for additional supervisor.

The original report from voting in the district, which elected three additional supervisors, showed Russell Hartley of Roanoke and A. E. Rogers of Lumberport tied.

Guy Robertson, committee secretary, said a recount showed Hartley elected. The others elected in the district were G. Manley Curry of Lost Creek and Bernard Linger of Roanoke.

The committee certified the following results in other districts:

Eastern Panhandle—C. C. Spring of Great Cacapon, J. Leslie Cain of Berkeley Springs and A. E. Clohan of Cherry Run.

Greenbrier Valley — Randall Daugherty of Peterstown, C. F. McClintic of Williamsburg and W. M. Higginbotham of Frankfort.

Robertson said the districts soon will hold organization meetings and get started on their conservation programs.

Maryland at the GOP Convention

WESTERN MARYLAND REPUBLICANS have been happily recognized in the appointment of J. Glenn Beall, of this county, to the important position of membership on the Resolutions committee of the Republican national convention. Mr. Beall went to Philadelphia yesterday, his presence there thus far in advance of the opening of the convention being made necessary by the serious work the Resolutions committee will be required to perform by reason of the tragic war developments and the national defense emergency. This committee will do the preliminary work on the party platform.

The Maryland delegation is expected to go to Philadelphia Sunday, traveling singly or in small groups. Under call of W. David Tilghman, chairman of the State Central committee, the members will meet that night at the Maryland headquarters in the Hotel Philadelphia, at which time he will deliver the credentials and badges.

Beall, former state senator and former chairman of the State Roads Commission, goes to the Resolutions committee without instructions. The Maryland delegation is pledged to vote for the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey for president as long as Dewey has a chance to win the nomination, this being required by the Dewey preference vote in the recent state primary election. A strong second preference for Wendell L. Willkie has developed among the delegation and in the event Dewey cannot make the grade the likelihood is, according to word coming here from Baltimore, that the delegation will go to Willkie in that eventuality.

Members of the Maryland delegation to the national convention named to special committees by Tilghman in addition to Beall, who resigned as delegation secretary when named to the Resolutions committee, include: Credentials, David G. Harry, of Harford county; rules, Davis C. Burroughs, of Easton; committee to notify the nominee for president, J. Cookman Boyd; to notify the nominee for vice-president, Frank Small, Jr., of Prince George's county; on permanent organization, George Moffett, of Queen Anne's county; secretary of the delegation, James Jenkins, of Baltimore.

Members of the delegation in addition to those mentioned include Harry O. Levin, Baltimore; Charles W. Bennett, Wicomico county; J. Purdon Wright, Baltimore; Lawrence Fraley, Garrett county; J. Leslie Jones, Baltimore; Mrs. Karl P. Steinman, Baltimore; Paul Robertson, Baltimore.

These delegates can be expected to give a good account of themselves at the convention.

Government Economy Must Be Effected

AS these lines were written, the federal Senate was considering the defense tax measure and its passage this week is expected.

The measure has been considerably strengthened by the action of the Finance committee in attaching the Byrd amendment calling for a ten per cent cut in all items of non-military expenditures, also by including the provision of Senator Townsend's bill to forbid further purchases of foreign silver.

Both of these additions make for necessary economy and should by all means be included in the enacted measure. The enormous additional burdens the people will have to bear atop the tremendous national debt call for sacrifice and among government workers equally with the sacrifices that will have to be undergone elsewhere and by all others. In fact, many believe the moves toward economy are not yet sufficient.

It is unfortunate that the chief Washington spender is lukewarm to such economy proposals and that, instead of heartily approving and furthering them, he hedges with dubious words to the effect that not much can be expected in the way of cuts because most of the big items are fixed charges covering necessary operations. But the extraordinary financial burdens faced are such that drastic reductions are essential except in the military expenditures and that many things heretofore considered necessary cannot now so be regarded.

As a matter of fact, government economy has too long been deloyed. It is not pleasing to consider that if ten per cent, or even less, had been lopped off the New Deal extravagance and waste during the last seven years, there would now be sufficient revenue for national defense extras without extending taxation down to those whose earnings are reduced to almost a subsistence level.

In 1913, when the national income was only $35,400,000,000, the percentage of federal government expenditure to that of income was two per cent. In 1929, when national income reached $90,900,000,000, the highest figure ever known, the percentage of federal expenditure was only 3.3 per cent. But in 1934 the percentage of federal expenditure to national income jumped to 12.8 per cent, and in 1939 it was 13.8 per cent. For the seven New Deal years it has averaged 12.4 per cent.

The little fellow, once the "forgotten man," but suddenly remembered, will now be soaked to make up in part for past extravagance. He will not only pay for national defense, of which he will gladly bear his share, but in reality he will be permanently loaded down with taxation to continue the scandalous New Deal extravagance and waste. He can find little comfort in the promises that this extra burden is to run for only five years. Taxes once fastened upon the people are seldom removed.

West Virginians Will Pass On Justices' Courts

"J. P." COURTS and their attendant constables will be eliminated in West Virginia if a proposed constitutional amendment is approved in the November election.

The amendment would revamp the present state judiciary system, mainly through abolishing the positions of 599 justices of the peace, whose principal duties are to settle minor disputes, issue warrants and determine bail, and of 585 constables. The proposal was approved by the legislature in 1939.

Criticism of the justice's office in West Virginia, as in many other states, is that it is inefficient and outmoded. Since the justice gets a fee for each case he hears, he has an incentive to create speed traps or encourage law suits, it is averred.

Because of the overlapping jurisdictions of justice courts and city police courts in West Virginia, the duties of justices, constables, city police, state police and county sheriffs often conflict, "creating a situation that may result in shifting responsibility and uncertain justice," a report by the Council of State Governments says.

To replace the justice's court, the new amendment proposes a "summary court" for each county in the state. The sheriff and his deputies would serve as administrative agents to the new court in lieu of constables. The summary court could sit anywhere in the county unless the legislature provided otherwise, and would be open continuously for business. Its jury in criminal cases would have only six members, instead of the twelve in the justice's court.

Jurisdiction of the summary court would extend to civil actions concerning $500 or less, instead of those up to $300 as in the present justice's court. Judgments of the summary court could be reviewed in the circuit court on appeal or writ of error, and could be carried to the supreme court of appeals. All felony cases would go to the circuit court.

Judges of the summary courts would be elected for four-year terms. They would be compensated by salaries instead of fees.

The West Virginia amendment is one of the few of its kind submitted to the voters, although dissatisfaction with the justice of peace office is widespread, the council says. Davidson county, Tenn., abolished justices' courts in 1937, replacing them with courts of general session with appointed judges. Several Virginia counties, by state consent, have supplanted justices of the peace with appointed trial justices within recent years.

No Cause for Wonder

SENATOR RUSH HOLT, of West Virginia, who will be retired next January for being offside, asserts that the traveling expenses of federal officials this year amount to more than $80,000,000, and that the amount spent for travel by these same gentlemen in the last ten years came to more than $540,000,000.

It will be remembered, though, that a recent House committee investigation revealed that business required Howard Hunter, first assistant boss of the WJA, to be in Louisville on Derby Day in '36, '37, '38 and '39, also to be in New Orleans in those same years when the Sugar Bowl games were played, and in Miami this year when the famous Flamingo Stakes race was run.

Prices jump in cities sponsoring such gala occasions and if any considerable number of the nation's public servants were as unfortunate in their assignments as Mr. Hunter there is no cause for wonder that it ran into money.

Poo for Psychoanalysts

By MARSHALL MASLIN

When I was a boy I had a favorite dream. . . . Well, I wouldn't exactly call it a "favorite." Perhaps it should merely be called a frequent dream.

I'd find myself in my uncle's high basement, where they keep the jams and jellies and stove wood. All around the sides of the room, one-foot long pieces of oak were piled high. . . . And suddenly I'd find myself there in the basement in the active company of a big white billygoat with a long beard.

Marshall Maslin

And that goat never liked me. As long as I knew that dream billygoat, he never once gave me a kind look. As soon as he saw me he'd start butting this small boy around. He'd chase me around and knock me down and dare me to get up and when I did he'd knock me down again, and I suppose I bellowed and bellowed but I can't remember that part of the dream.

Can you explain that nightmare? I can't.

It couldn't have come from any secret sorrows or frustrations that the small boy had. The only grief I had at the time was ingrained envy of the kid on the next block, Lloyd Locke, who skooted along the sidewalk on two-wheeled skates while we had to do with four-wheeled ones. . . . Later on I was shy with girls and could not wink or whistle through my teeth. But at the time I had no such troubles and my only similar experience came later when a flock of geese hissed me into a mud puddle when I was wearing my new sailor suit.

Since then I have had a few troubles and some worries but never any billygoat nightmares to disturb my slumbers and I've just about decided that the psychoanalysts are all wrong when they analyze our dreams to decide what secret anxieties are ours.

Because, when I had no troubles, a billygoat used to butt me around a basement; and now that I have the normal number of cares mine is a dreamless sleep. . . . It doesn't make sense.

Ballyhoo Stuff Not in Order, Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

GREENVILLE, S. C., June 18.—Recruiting for the enlarged regular army is moving too slowly to succeed.

Part of the War Department plans for a major military effort is a whoop-la recruiting drive for volunteers to "bridge the gap of time until the system for compulsory selective service can be created and started working."

Hugh Johnson

Under the guidance of the governors and after an assignment of quotas to each county, committees of leading citizens are to get busy on the boys and needle them into uniform.

There is considerable insistence that a new law for selective service be "carefully studied, debated and prepared now while the recruiting drive gets under way."

All this is pretty awful. An hysterical ballyhoo campaign to drum up a war fever is exactly what we don't want now—especially during an election on the third-term tradition.

Heroes and Heels

Before we got through with it, every boy who preferred to wait for the scientific selective system would be called a heel and every impulsive youngster who was fifed, kettle-drummed and orated into signing up would be a hero.

The process would put a shadow on the former class and not get the best material in the latter.

Modern mechanized war requires careful selection.

Just taking men at random was good enough, when all a soldier had to do was march straight ahead and carry a rifle.

A file-closer in his rear could tell him what to do and prod him with a bayonet if he didn't do it fast enough.

Those days are gone forever.

An excellent, if extreme example, of the change is the German parachute troops.

Each man is dropped down strictly on his own behind enemy lines to be a little army in himself.

Soldiers in mechanized troops to be automotive and radio mechanics, expert gunners and drivers and sometimes adept with explosives, gases and defenses against both.

Must Know More

On top of this, they must know far more of the principles of military art than any non-commisioned soldier ever had to know before.

You don't get this kind of material in the run-of-mill product of a voluntary recruiting office.

The English are very proud of their process of universal selection to fit the square, round and assorted pegs into a square, round and assorted holes—and not otherwise.

Well, they aren't teaching us anything.

We invented and applied all that in 1918.

There is much misconception about the selective service system.

If it is intelligently set up, there will be no "gap of time" to fill by volunteering.

We set up the registration system in ten days.

We delayed registration another ten days, but not for the sake of the system—merely to give ample time for notice of the day, June 5th.

It is true that the big draft did not begin to move until September. But that wasn't due to any unreadiness of the system.

It was because the army was not ready to receive the men.

Proof of this is that the first man was inducted July 4th—and he might just as well have been 100,000 men.

Proved in Practice

Even when we changed the system to a complete examination and classification for service of almost ten million men, that process took only sixty days.

The selective service law needs no debate nor overhauling.

Its product proved it in practice to be the most nearly perfect major organization and administrative effort this country ever made.

A curse of this country in war is our passion for improvization. We insist on changing everything whether it needs it or not.

With so much in rearmament that does need revolutionary change, we ought to take a holiday on untried adventure—pay a little more attention to the voice of experience and a little less to the spontaneous brain throbs of our earnest and wellmeaning theorists.

TO SPEED DEFENSE

Dr. Vannevar Bush

Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington and head of the national advisory committee for aeronautics, has been named by President Roosevelt to head a defense resources committee of eight members. The committee will do further experimental work to accelerate the defense program.

Getting Halfway Into the War

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

Somewhat amazing to the writer of this editorial is the opinion apparently held by most Americans just now that we should get further into the war but should never think of sending our men overseas.

This plan for a limited liability participation in war has never worked in the past and probably never will work in the future.

As a practical matter you can't be half in war and half out. We started into the World war with the idea that no American soldiers would be sent to France. The Allied governments told us that they had no need of additional manpower. But within a few weeks the Allies were calling for troops and we were building up an American army for transportation across seas.

On practical grounds this idea of half way participation is most impractical. On spiritual grounds it is even less desirable. Have you ever heard of any great nation in all the history of the world which undertook to fight its enemies by sending its allies money and goods while its men stayed comfortably at home?

No people could hold its place in the world by playing so contemptible a role. There are a lot of reasons—some of them very good ones—why the United States should keep out of the European war. There are reasons why we should go in. But this idea that we can break Hitler by writing checks and working in the factories is easy, comfortable — and unsound!

Ranting Is Protested

Overseas Aid Not Liked by Reader in View of World War Experience

Editor The Cumberland News:

I am sick and tired of all this ranting about helping the Allies. Didn't they lie to us to get us into the last war. Then didn't they cheat us at the end of the war? They thumbed their noses at us until Hitler got after them and now we are being fed the same old story.

It is a grand opportunity for Mr. Roosevelt to climb to a third term if he can make us forget all the disastrous Communistic schemes he and his New Deal gang tried to force on the country. Let us defend our own shores and, for a change, let England fight her own war. She does almost as well at starving innocent people to death as Hitler does at bombing.

Very truly yours,

GONE IS THE GLORY

Swift Changes Are Seen As Bringing Hoover and Willkie to the Forefront

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 18—When this campaign year was very young, as long ago as last January, a survey was made of the Republican presidential material. This listing of Republican possibilities, their qualifications and their chances, was made by a shrewd and experienced observer of the political scene, detached and impartial, Mr. Robert Moses, head of the New York Park System. His survey, published in the Saturday Evening Post, was as simply clinical as that of a scientist. It was as intelligent and comprehensive an appraisal of Republican timber as any one could make, at a time six months ahead of the convention.

Herbert Hoover

What Mr. Moses said about the possibilities then beginning to emerge—Mr. Dewey, Senator Taft, Senator Vandenberg, and the others—is not pertinent to this article. But there is striking interest in what this survey said about one man who, at that time, was regarded as not a possibility.

Held as Best Equipped

"Mr. Hoover comes much closer to real leadership . . . It is altogether unlikely that he could be nominated if he sought the nomination—which I am sure is not the case—and equally improbable that he could be elected. Nevertheless, he has a tremendous hold on influential people and his is by all odds the most intelligent, the most patriotic and the best equipped mind in the (Republican) party today. No one who has seen Mr. Hoover in a group discussing public affairs, national or international, can question his extraordinary background and equipment. It is, in many respects, a tragedy that he is not himself available, but this constitutes no earthly reason why he should not be enormously influential in the party deliberations."

That judgment about Mr. Hoover was general. Of all the combinations of words uttered in the United States during the past six months, there were two in the world of politics that were outstanding. One, having to do with the Democratic nomination, was: "Will he try for a third term?" The other, having to do with the Republican nomination was: "Of course Mr. Hoover is the best equipped man, but—." Those words must have been uttered millions of times

Upsurge of Sentiment

Yet recently, during May and June, there has been an upsurge of sentiment for Mr. Hoover, increased talk of him by party leaders, and by thoughtful persons generally. The talk increases as the convention comes near.

To recite this as merely a striking contrast—between what was, six months ago, and what is, today—would be a superfluity. There are many such changes. These six months past, perhaps more than any six months in recorded history, have shaken men loose from their servitude to the familiar, have compelled them to believe the incredible. How many in America last January thought that by June America would be staring at the possibility of German conquest over France and Britain—and that we would be arming against the consequences of such a conquest to America itself? How many thought that the Swastika would be waving over the Eiffel Tower? Millions, practically everybody in America, who last January, and for a century before, took the British fleet for granted, almost as they took the ocean for granted, are today obliged to adjust themselves to seeing that, upon America, the effect of the loss of the British fleet would be almost like the drying up of the ocean.

Another Striking Change

In this very field of American activities, there is another six months change, almost as striking as the emergence of Mr. Hoover. Last January, hardly one human being—and it is not necessary to make an exception of the one most concerned—though that by June a man heretofore obscure, Mr. Wendell Willkie, would figure as a serious presidential possibility.

How far the movement toward Mr. Hoover will go, no one can say. The Republican nomination is in the disposition of a thousand persons, who will compose the Republican convention next week. It is one of the freest, most uncommitted, most un-led conventions that ever met. Hardly more than a hundred out of the thousand persons are legally committed to any candidate as the result of primaries, and even such commitments by direct primaries are not meant to be permanently binding. The thousand persons who compose the Republican convention will do what seems to them best when they come together.

Best Man the Aim

About Mr. Hoover as a possibility, one thing can be said. In porportion as the problems ahead are difficult and complex, in proportion as the country faces crisis, the disposition, and the obligation, to nominate the best man becomes stronger. More and more, Republicans ask themselves: "If we have one man best equipped to be president, what reason can we gave for not nominating him?"

True, the practically universal assent that Mr. Hoover is the best man for president, has frequently been accompanied by a question whether he would be the best candidate, where he could be elected as readily as some others. This doubt of Mr. Hoover's strength as a candidate was the "but—" that was the usual argument against nominating him.

Wendell L. Willkie

Yet, in a period of change and reversal in many areas of life, a period including tremendous movements of mass thought, and a period when these shifts of mass feeling are often unnoticed until they emerge—in such a time, maybe there has been a change in what we are here discussing. Maybe the reasons, including the prejudice among some groups, which were supposed to operate against Mr. Hoover as a candidate—maybe there has been change here too.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Pat McCarran, Democrat, of Nevada

I regret to say that it is apparent there is a desire to prevent the Senate from ever voting upon the Walter-Logan Bill. Whether the bill be right or wrong, surely the Senate of the United States should have an opportunity to express itself on it.

Troubled World Makes One Yearn For the Outdoors

By EDWIN C. HILL

The dismal and doleful echoes of war fall like lead on the human spirit. Few are so phlegmatic as to be immune from the general miasma of depression. One yearns for the woods, the lakes and the streams of the north country, so peaceful, so remote from the crash and clamor of a disordered world. One yearns with a great yearning for a log cabin, weathered by the years, friendly and comfortable, looking over one of the loveliest lakes of azure crystal ever fashioned by the hands of the Almighty among the serene and changeless mountains.

Edwin C. Hill

One yearns for the blessed dark, with its healing silences, broken only by the weird call of a bear mother up in the mountains, or by the sharp, impudent bark of a red fox, or the scuffling of Brother Porcupine out in the brush. One yearns for the dreamless sleep, and the awakening to the first faint flush of rose down behind the eastern ridge; for the spreading glory of the triumphant sun, all red and gold; and the full, bright morning, with the wind fluttering from the west and trout and landlocked salmon nosing to the surface and taking their own Bertillon measurements in the circles that spread over the unrippled surface.

Yearns for All

The troubled spirit yearns for all these things — for the long trail and the canoe, the birch-covered bends which are never the same in their lovely, mysterious immobility, where the slender silver birches curtesy and bow like graceful ladies before the caperings of the west wind; for the deep pools, where the wise trout lie deep down in cold depths fed by eternal springs; for the graceful play of silken flies cast ever so lightly out over the pools and under the leaning alders, silken flies whose very names are alluring.

A precious moment is the thrill that almost stops the heart when a big trout shoots upward from the dark depths of the pool, strikes with savage intensity, curving clear over the delicate leader, and is hooked to his doom. And then the tranquil evening, paddling upstream with never a swirl or swish of the surface water, as silent as a ghost in a ghostly canoe, surprising the deer at the level bars along the stream bends as they come down to drink in the evening, leaving their little spotted fawns hidden in the alders, while the big bucks watch from the nearby ridge.

Ready at a Flash

These are the graceful, shy does, with great ears twitching away the flies, brown eyes staring intently at the silently moving canoe, poised on springs of terror, ready at a flash or a splash to go leaping away in curving loops back into the alders and the forest, flying their white flags behind them.

The great heron lifts life a seaplane as she soars from the top branch of an old lightning-blasted pine and sweeps upward and away with a vast spread of wings. The shelldrake ducks, mother and father and half-grown youngsters, stretching clear across the stream in a level line, and suddenly startled, scuttering from water to wing with a sudden, terrific energy that sends the foam behind them in a wide, tormented wake.

Real Adventure

And as dark falls, old Mother Black Bear, rooting and grunting among the wild red raspberry bushes with her two cubs, little clowns of the woodland. And her sudden "Woof"! of alarm and warning as she turns away through the brush, cubs rolling and tumbling after her, thrilling with the terror and adventure of a new experience.

And then the canoe-landing, and taking down the fly-rods, and taking up the pack, and the long, hard hike back over the mountain trail, over and down the mountain to the glow of lantern light in log cabin windows, and the pleasant murmur of voices, and the aroma of good food cooking for a hungry man. Outdoors in the month of June.

War Mongering Not Advisable

Safety of American Youth Is Regarded as the More Important

Editor The Cumberland News:

I think that the proposed "Stop Hitler" advertisement is about the silliest piece of nonsense imaginable. It is in keeping with the rantings of the jittery war mongers in our midst who are more concerned with the safety of the British nation that they are with the welfare of our American youth. It is a fine companion piece to Mr. Roosevelt's army "on ordah". To go along with these two specimens of absurdity, I would propose an army of Boy Scouts with pea shooters.

A "Stop Roosevelt" movement would be far better however for the welfare of our nation and its glorious heritage, which was betrayed seven years ago when the New Dealers came into power.

Very truly yours,

Maryland at the GOP Convention

WESTERN MARYLAND REPUBLICANS have been happily recognized in the appointment of J. Glenn Beall, of this county, to the important position of membership on the Resolutions committee of the Republican national convention. Mr. Beall went to Philadelphia yesterday, his presence there thus far in advance of the opening of the convention being made necessary by the serious work the Resolutions committee will be required to perform by reason of the tragic war developments and the national defense emergency. This committee will do the preliminary work on the party platform.

The Maryland delegation is expected to go to Philadelphia Sunday, traveling singly or in small groups. Under call of W. David Tilghman, chairman of the State Central committee, the members will meet that night at the Maryland headquarters in the Hotel Philadelphia, at which time he will deliver the credentials and badges.

Beall, former state senator and former chairman of the State Roads Commission, goes to the Resolutions committee without instructions. The Maryland delegation is pledged to vote for the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey for president as long as Dewey has a chance to win the nomination, this being required by the Dewey preference vote in the recent state primary election. A strong second preference for Wendell L. Willkie has developed among the delegation and in the event Dewey cannot make the grade the likelihood is, according to word coming here from Baltimore, that the delegation will go to Willkie in that eventuality.

Members of the Maryland delegation to the national convention named to special committees by Tilghman in addition to Beall, who resigned as delegation secretary when named to the Resolutions committee, include: Credentials, David G. Harry, of Harford county; rules, Davis C. Burroughs, of Easton; committee to notify the nominee for president, J. Cookman Boyd; to notify the nominee for vice-president, Frank Small, Jr., of Prince George's county; on permanent organization, George Moffett, of Queen Anne's county; secretary of the delegation, James Jenkins, of Baltimore.

Members of the delegation in addition to those mentioned include Harry O. Levin, Baltimore; Charles W. Bennett, Wicomico county; J. Purdon Wright, Baltimore; Lawrence Fraley, Garrett county; J. Leslie Jones, Baltimore; Mrs. Karl P. Steinman, Baltimore; Paul Robertson, Baltimore.

These delegates can be expected to give a good account of themselves at the convention.

Government Economy Must Be Effected

AS these lines were written, the federal Senate was considering the defense tax measure and its passage this week is expected.

The measure has been considerably strengthened by the action of the Finance committee in attaching the Byrd amendment calling for a ten per cent cut in all items of non-military expenditures, also by including the provision of Senator Townsend's bill to forbid further purchases of foreign silver.

Both of these additions make for necessary economy and should by all means be included in the enacted measure. The enormous additional burdens the people will have to bear atop the tremendous national debt call for sacrifice and among government workers equally with the sacrifices that will have to be undergone elsewhere and by all others. In fact, many believe the moves toward economy are not yet sufficient.

It is unfortunate that the chief Washington spender is lukewarm to such economy proposals and that, instead of heartily approving and furthering them, he hedges with dubious words to the effect that not much can be expected in the way of cuts because most of the big items are fixed charges covering necessary operations. But the extraordinary financial burdens faced are such that drastic reductions are essential except in the military expenditures and that many things heretofore considered necessary cannot now so be regarded.

As a matter of fact, government economy has too long been deloyed. It is not pleasing to consider that if ten per cent, or even less, had been lopped off the New Deal extravagance and waste during the last seven years, there would now be sufficient revenue for national defense extras without extending taxation down to those whose earnings are reduced to almost a subsistence level.

In 1913, when the national income was only $35,400,000,000, the percentage of federal government expenditure to that of income was two per cent. In 1929, when national income reached $80,900,000,000, the highest figure ever known, the percentage of federal expenditure was only 3.8 per cent. But in 1934 the percentage of federal expenditure to national income jumped to 12.8 per cent, and in 1939 it was 13.8 per cent. For the seven New Deal years it has averaged 12.4 per cent.

The little fellow, once the "forgotten man," but suddenly remembered, will now be soaked to make up in part for past extravagance. He will not only pay for national defense, of which he will gladly bear his share, but in reality he will be permanently loaded down with taxation to continue the scandalous New Deal extravagance and waste. He can find little comfort in the promises that this extra burden is to run for only five years. Taxes once fastened upon the people are seldom removed.

West Virginians Will Pass On Justices' Courts

"J. P." COURTS and their attendant constables will be eliminated in West Virginia if a proposed constitutional amendment is approved in the November election.

The amendment would revamp the present state judiciary system, mainly through abolishing the positions of 599 justices of the peace, whose principal duties are to settle minor disputes, issue warrants and determine bail, and of 585 constables. The proposal was approved by the legislature in 1939.

Criticism of the justice's office in West Virginia, as in many other states, is that it is inefficient and outmoded. Since the justice gets a fee for each case he hears, he has an incentive to create speed traps or encourage law suits, it is averred.

Because of the overlapping jurisdictions of justice courts and city police courts in West Virginia, the duties of justices, constables, city police, state police and county sheriffs often conflict, "creating a situation that may result in shifting responsibility and uncertain justice," a report by the Council of State Governments says.

To replace the justice's court, the new amendment proposes a "summary court" for each county in the state. The sheriff and his deputies would serve as administrative agents to the new court in lieu of constables. The summary court could sit anywhere in the county unless the legislature provided otherwise, and would be open continuously for business. Its jury in criminal cases would have only six members, instead of the twelve in the justice's court.

Jurisdiction of the summary court would extend to civil actions concerning $500 or less, instead of those up to $300 as in the present justice's court. Judgments of the summary court could be reviewed in the circuit court on appeal or writ of error, and could be carried to the supreme court of appeals. All felony cases would go to the circuit court.

Judges of the summary courts would be elected for four-year terms. They would be compensated by salaries instead of fees.

The West Virginia amendment is one of the few of its kind submitted to the voters, although dissatisfaction with the justice of peace office is widespread, the council says. Davidson county, Tenn., abolished justices' courts in 1937, replacing them with courts of general session with appointed judges. Several Virginia counties, by state consent, have supplanted justices of the peace with appointed trial justices within recent years.

No Cause for Wonder

SENATOR RUSH HOLT, of West Virginia, who will be retired next January for being offside, asserts that the traveling expenses of federal officials this year amount to more than $80,000,000, and that the amount spent for travel by these same gentlemen in the last ten years came to more than $540,000,000.

It will be remembered, though, that a recent House committee investigation revealed that business required Howard Hunter, first assistant boss of the WJA, to be in Louisville on Derby Day in '36, '37, '38 and '39, also to be in New Orleans in those same years when the Sugar Bowl games were played, and in Miami this year when the famous Flamingo Stakes race was run.

Prices jump in cities sponsoring such gala occasions and if any considerable number of the nation's public servants were as unfortunate in their assignments as Mr. Hunter there is no cause for wonder that it ran into money.

Everybody—well, not everybody but a great many—laughed when Henry Ford said he could turn out a thousand war planes a day if let alone. Those who didn't laugh recalled what Ford has done while being pestered.

England's victories, goes the old saying, are won on the playing fields of Eton. Judging by the recklessness of his blitzkriegs, Adolf Hitler's victories must be hatched in the gambling joints of Berlin.

Our curbstone philosopher wants to know why the photographs of Mussolini never show the fly he's apparently trying to blow off the end of his nose.

Science declares that only one-fourth of a person's mind is at work when he thinks, and in lots of cases it is the wrong fourth at that.

A curse of this country in war is our passion for improvization. We insist on changing everything whether it needs it or not.

With so much in rearmament that does need revolutionary change, we ought to take a holiday on untried adventure—pay a little more attention to the voice of experience and a little less to the spontaneous brain throbs of our earnest and wellmeaning theorists.

GONE IS THE GLORY

Swift Changes Are Seen As Bringing Hoover and Willkie to the Forefront

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 18—When this campaign year was very young, as long ago as last January, a survey was made of the Republican presidential material. This listing of Republican possibilities, their qualifications and their chances, was made by a shrewd and experienced observer of the political scene, detached and impartial, Mr. Robert Moses, head of the New York Park System. His survey, published in the Saturday Evening Post, was as simply clinical as that of a scientist. It was as intelligent and comprehensive an appraisal of Republican timber as any one could make, at a time six months ahead of the convention.

Herbert Hoover

What Mr. Moses said about the possibilities then beginning to emerge—Mr. Dewey, Senator Taft, Senator Vandenberg, and the others—is not pertinent to this article. But there is striking interest in what this survey said about one man who, at that time, was regarded as not a possibility.

Held as Best Equipped

"Mr. Hoover comes much closer to real leadership . . . It is altogether unlikely that he could be nominated if he sought the nomination—which I am sure is not the case—and equally improbable that he could be elected. Nevertheless, he has a tremendous hold on influential people and his is by all odds the most intelligent, the most patriotic and the best equipped mind in the (Republican) party today. No one who has seen Mr. Hoover in a group discussing public affairs, national or international, can question his extraordinary background and equipment. It is, in many respects, a tragedy that he is not himself available, but this constitutes no earthly reason why he should not be enormously influential in the party deliberations."

That judgment about Mr. Hoover was general. Of all the combinations of words uttered in the United States during the past six months, there were two in the world of politics that were outstanding. One, having to do with the Democratic nomination, was: "Will he try for a third term?" The other, having to do with the Republican nomination was: "Of course Mr. Hoover is the best equipped man, but—." Those words must have been uttered millions of times

Upsurge of Sentiment

Yet recently, during May and June, there has been an upsurge of sentiment for Mr. Hoover, increased talk of him by party leaders, and by thoughtful persons generally. The talk increases as the convention comes near.

To recite this as merely a striking contrast—between what was, six months ago, and what is, today—would be a superfluity. There are many such changes. These six months past, perhaps more than any six months in recorded history, have shaken men loose from their servitude to the familiar, have compelled them to believe the incredible. How many in America last January thought that by June America would be staring at the possibility of German conquest over France and Britain—and that we would be arming against the consequences of such a conquest to America itself? How many thought that the Swastika would be waving over the Eiffel Tower? Millions, practically everybody in America, who last January, and for a century before, took the British fleet for granted, almost as they took the ocean for granted, are today obliged to adjust themselves to seeing that, upon America, the effect of the loss of the British fleet would be almost like the drying up of the ocean.

Another Striking Change

In this very field of American activities, there is another six months change, almost as striking as the emergence of Mr. Hoover. Last January, hardly one human being—and it is not necessary to make an exception of the one most concerned—though that by June a man heretofore obscure, Mr. Wendell Willkie, would figure as a serious presidential possibility.

How far the movement toward Mr. Hoover will go, no one can say. The Republican nomination is in the disposition of a thousand persons, who will compose the Republican convention next week. It is one of the freest, most uncommitted, most un-led conventions that ever met. Hardly more than a hundred out of the thousand persons are legally committed to any candidate as the result of primaries, and even such commitments by direct primaries are not meant to be permanently binding. The thousand persons who compose the Republican convention will do what seems to them best when they come together.

Best Man the Aim

About Mr. Hoover as a possibility, one thing can be said. In porportion as the problems ahead are difficult and complex, in proportion as the country faces crisis, the disposition, and the obligation, to nominate the best man becomes stronger. More and more, Republicans ask themselves: "If we have one man best equipped to be president, what reason can we gave for not nominating him?"

True, the practically universal assent that Mr. Hoover is the best man for president, has frequently been accompanied by a question whether he would be the best candidate, where he could be elected as readily as some others. This doubt of Mr. Hoover's strength as a candidate was the "but—" that was the usual argument against nominating him.

Yet, in a period of change and reversal in many areas of life, a period including tremendous movements of mass thought, and a period when these shifts of mass feeling are often unnoticed until they emerge—in such a time, maybe there has been a change in what we are here discussing. Maybe the reasons, including the prejudice among some groups, which were supposed to operate against Mr. Hoover as a candidate—maybe there has been change here too.

Getting Halfway Into the War

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

Somewhat amazing to the writer of this editorial is the opinion apparently held by most Americans just now that we should get further into the war but should never think of sending our men overseas.

This plan for a limited liability participation in war has never worked in the past and probably never will work in the future.

As a practical matter you can't be half in war and half out. We started into the World war with the idea that no American soldiers would be sent to France. The Allied governments told us that they had no need of additional manpower. But within a few weeks the Allies were calling for troops and we were building up an American army for transportation across seas.

On practical grounds this idea of half way participation is most impractical. On spiritual grounds it is even less desirable. Have you ever heard of any great nation in all the history of the world which undertook to fight its enemies by sending its allies money and goods while its men stayed comfortably at home?

No people could hold its place in the world by playing so contemptible a role. There are a lot of reasons—some of them very good ones—why the United States should keep out of the European war. There are reasons why we should go in. But this idea that we can break Hitler by writing checks and working in the factories is easy, comfortable — and unsound!

Ranting Is Protested

Editor The Cumberland News:

I am sick and tired of all this ranting about helping the Allies. Didn't they lie to us to get us into the last war. Then didn't they cheat us at the end of the war? They thumbed their noses at us until Hitler got after them and now we are being fed the same old story.

It is a grand opportunity for Mr. Roosevelt to climb to a third term if he can make us forget all the disastrous Communistic schemes he and his New Deal gang tried to force on the country. Let us defend our own shores and, for a change, let England fight her own war. She does almost as well at starving innocent people to death as Hitler does at bombing.

Very truly yours,
MALCOLM HALE

Troubled World Makes One Yearn For the Outdoors

By EDWIN C. HILL

The dismal and doleful echoes of war fall like lead on the human spirit. Few are so phlegmatic as to be immune from the general miasma of depression. One yearns for the woods, the lakes and the streams of the north country, so peaceful, so remote from the crash and clamor of a disordered world. One yearns with a great yearning for a log cabin, weathered by the years, friendly and comfortable, looking over one of the loveliest lakes of azure crystal ever fashioned by the hands of the Almighty among the serene and changeless mountains.

Edwin C. Hill

One yearns for the blessed dark, with its healing silences, broken only by the weird call of a bear mother up in the mountains, or by the sharp, impudent bark of a red fox, or the scuffling of Brother Porcupine out in the brush. One yearns for the dreamless sleep, and the awakening to the first faint flush of rose down behind the eastern ridge; for the spreading glory of the triumphant sun, all red and gold; and the full, bright morning, with the wind fluttering from the west and trout and landlocked salmon nosing to the surface and taking their own Bertillon measurements in the circles that spread over the unrippled surface.

Yearns for All

The troubled spirit yearns for all these things — for the long trail and the canoe, the birch-covered bends which are never the same in their lovely, mysterious immobility, where the slender silver birches curtesy and bow like graceful ladies before the caperings of the west wind; for the deep pools, where the wise trout lie deep down in cold depths fed by eternal springs; for the graceful play of silken flies cast ever so lightly out over the pools and under the leaning alders, silken flies whose very names are alluring.

A precious moment is the thrill that almost stops the heart when a big trout shoots upward from the dark depths of the pool, strikes with savage intensity, curving clear over the delicate leader, and is hooked to his doom. And then the tranquil evening, paddling upstream with never a swirl or swish of the surface water, as silent as a ghost in a ghostly canoe, surprising the deer at the level bars along the stream bends as they come down to drink in the evening, leaving their little spotted fawns hidden in the alders, while the big bucks watch from the nearby ridge.

These are the graceful, shy does, with great ears twitching away the flies, brown eyes staring intently at the silently moving canoe, poised on springs of terror, ready at a flash or a splash to go leaping away in curving loops back into the alders and the forest, flying their white flags behind them.

The great heron lifts life a seaplane as she soars from the top branch of an old lightning-blasted pine and sweeps upward and away with a vast spread of wings. The shelldrake ducks, mother and father and half-grown youngsters, stretching clear across the stream in a level line, and suddenly startled, scuttering from water to wing with a sudden, terrific energy that sends the foam behind them in a wide, tormented wake.

Real Adventure

And as dark falls, old Mother Black Bear, rooting and grunting among the wild red raspberry bushes with her two cubs, little clowns of the woodland. And her sudden "Woof"! of alarm and warning as she turns away through the brush, cubs rolling and tumbling after her, thrilling with the terror and adventure of a new experience.

And then the canoe-landing, and taking down the fly-rods, and taking up the pack, and the long, hard hike back over the mountain trail, over and down the mountain to the glow of lantern light in log cabin windows, and the pleasant murmur of voices, and the aroma of good food cooking for a hungry man. Outdoors in the month of June.

War Mongering Not Advisable

Safety of American Youth Is Regarded as the More Important

Editor The Cumberland News:

I think that the proposed "Stop Hitler" advertisement is about the silliest piece of nonsense imaginable. It is in keeping with the rantings of the jittery war mongers in our midst who are more concerned with the safety of the British nation that they are with the welfare of our American youth. It is a fine companion piece to Mr. Roosevelt's army "on ordah". To go along with these two specimens of absurdity, I would propose an army of Boy Scouts with pea shooters.

A "Stop Roosevelt" movement would be far better however for the welfare of our nation and its glorious heritage, which was betrayed seven years ago when the New Dealers came into power.

Very truly yours,
JAMES ORTON.

Trouble Brews When Pupils Mark Papers

Parents Object to Teacher Letting Children Exchange Written Work

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Ever so many letters have been coming from parents concerning the grading of papers in school by the pupils exchanging them, or by one or two pupils of the class assigned to this duty. Writes one reader:

"Dear Dr. Myers: I have been reading your articles in the paper and enjoy them very much. I am saving them for a 'scrap book' to pass on to some of my friends.

I am not a teacher. I have a niece in the junior year in a neighboring high school, who makes high grades. Her teacher allows her to grade papers while the other children in her room take the examinations. She says she sees the different ones that copy and cheat, and that when she is grading she gives that pupil a low grade. I told her something was wrong and for her to stop grading for the teacher, as this would make her very unpopular with pupils. . . .Is it right to have one pupil grade the rest to have one pupil grade the rest?"

Deals Are Made

This is my answer:

When I was a lad in the country school, I remember that a certain teacher used to have us exchange spelling papers and mark the wrong words as the teacher spelled the words. By and by, Charley Atkinson and I, who used to sit near each other, made a deal agreeing to be blind to some errors as we followed the teacher. Occasionally one of us, however charged the other with not being liberal enough.

When I later taught in that same school, I occasionally had spelling papers exchanged and corrected, only I named the pairs who were to exchange, and not the same ones twice. Even then, I soon discovered that the scheme invited dissatisfaction and abandoned it. I never did have one pupil grade the papers of all the rest.

Nowadays, some teachers have children mark themselves or one another on one or several subjects almost daily, and since speed testing is so much in fashion, this practice seems to have been growing rapidly.

Teacher Should Grade

Tests now and then that are not against the watch have merit. In addition to letting the teacher know how well she has taught a unit of work, the test stimulates the pupil to want to be prepared. But I have come to believe that, excepting practice tests to be graded by the child himself, as a rule, no more tests or written work shiuld be required than the teacher herself has time to examine and grade. Tests usually should be short.

In case the student is set to do the grading he should, I believe, be one who can do it well, preferably with a "key," and be selected from a class one or several grades higher. When a child in his own class is set to mark papers of his classmates the hazards to him and the other students' morale is very great.

A selected list of books on How To Study may be had by writing me at 235 East 45th Street, New York, City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it; also a reading list on radio and our children.

Q. My seven-year-old daughter, on returning from an errand to the store is short ten cents. This has happened several times.

A. Don't send her to the store soon again. Tell her she is not big enough yet to take such responsibility; but don't charge her with stealing, if you suspect it.

Bidding went about the same at most tables of a big duplicate tournament, except that in some cases South took a set at Clubs. The interesting battles in play came, though, at the No Trump tables. In one case South led the club J to the Q. The heart 9, not covered, was allowed to win, and North likewise stayed off the spade K, winning the 8 with his A and returning his diamond K to make an entry for South in the suit. East let that win. North then played the spade 3 to the Q, whereupon South cashed the club A. Now he had to lead to East, who ran game.

Where North won the spade K lead to the third trick and returned a spade to South's Q, the club A was scored, but then East ran game and an overtrick. Game also resulted where East won the first club, led the spade J, which held, then the spade 5 to the K and A. North returning the diamond K to the A and South then getting the diamond Q. Spade Q and club A. One declarer started this same way, but on the fourth trick North led a heart, won by the 9. The diamond A, diamond J to the Q, club A and club to the Q followed, then a diamond to the K, the spade 3 to the Q and three club tricks, setting that sad declarer four tricks.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

If East had doubled spades during the bidding, West leads the club A and then switches to his diamond 7, what desperate play can South try in an effort to make his contract of 6-Diamonds?

Where North won the spade K lead to the third trick and returned a spade to South's Q, the club A was scored, but then East ran game and an overtrick. Game also resulted where East won the first club, led the spade J, which held, then the spade 5 to the K and A, North returning the diamond K to the A and South then getting the diamond Q. Spade Q and club A. One declarer started this same way, but on the fourth trick North led a heart, won by the 9. The diamond A, diamond J to the Q, club A and club to the Q followed, then a diamond to the K, the spade 3 to the Q and three club tricks, setting that sad declarer four tricks.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

If East had doubled spades during the bidding, West leads the club A and then switches to his diamond 7, what desperate play can South try in an effort to make his contract of 6-Diamonds?

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 17, (AP)—Genevieve Suiter's cap and gown appeared much as any of those worn by the other 190 candidates for degrees at the Marshall college commencement—but it was really something special:

It was the same worn by her parents on five occasions when they received degrees on five different occasions at three different colleges before her.

R. W. Suiter, former superintendent of Chesapeake, O., schools wore it at Colorado State Teachers college where he received two diplomas. Mrs. Suiter also received a degree at Colorado State in the same garb, and at Valparaiso, and later at Marshall.

Water Report Tells of Record Year's Work

Heavy Rains Cost City Extra Money At Lake Gordon

Construction of 4.3 miles of water mains, an all-time record, payment of $5,000 to thaw out water lines during the severe winter, and a saving of approximately $270 for street lighting, were the highlights of the report for the fiscal year as announced by William J. Edwards, city commissioner of water and light.

The report shows that the City Water Department, working in conjunction with the WPA in laying 22,753 feet of water main from April 1, 1939, to March 31, 1940, spent $111,654.66.

Cross Town Job Biggest

Of the 19,423 feet of water mains installed in the city, the Cross Town line to the Celanese was the major job as it took 14,050 feet of twenty-four inch pipe to complete this project. Six-inch mains were laid on Ashland avenue, Roetin avenue, Sunbury avenue, Holland street, Central avenue, Piedmont avenue, and Read Terrace, an eight-inch main on Sedgwick street and six-teen-inch mains on Polk and Mechanic streets.

In addition the city installed 3,300 feet of water main on the McMullen highway from the Celanese plant toward Cresaptown and from the McMullen highway to Fairgo.

Mr. Edwards in his report said:

"The operating department, under the able supervision of Simon K. Carroll, has established an all-time record. In no preceding year have so many feet of mains and service lines been installed within the corporate limits, and it is a question in my mind if ever before a more loyal or more efficient group of workmen were carried on the department payroll. The aforegoing may seem a broad statement, but judging from past records and reports, association and observation, I am convinced of its correctness."

During the cold period from December 27, 1939 to February 1, 1940 some 468 lines were frozen causing the department an expense for hiring of outside help in thawing these lines to the amount of $1,417.50 plus $132.58 for current used by the machines in defrosting the lines. The extra time paid from the operating cost of the Water Department caused by the freezings brought the cost to approximately $5,000. The city operating cost other than WPA was $68,158.05. The department purchased a defroster at a cost of $270. In addition, many service lines had to be renewed where streets had been torn up to place new water mains.

Installation of nineteen 1,000 candlepower lights in place of thirty-four 300 candlepower lights in Baltimore street saved the city approximately $270 for the fiscal year.

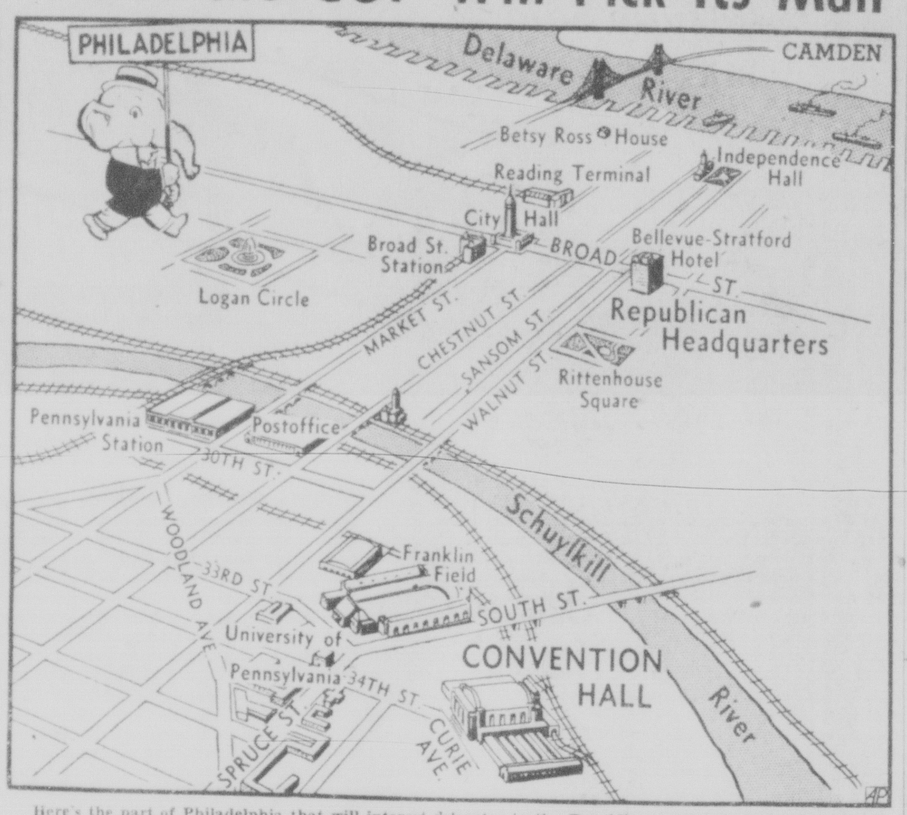

Water consumption for the year was 1,392,525,500 gallons and the revenue derived from same was $85,742.

Clarification Costs Rise

The report of C. J. Bruce, superintendent of the Evitts Creek Water Company, showed that total water consumption, as measured at Lake Gordon's filter plant, was 2,581,046,000 gallons, a daily average of 7,052,000 gallons. The company showed an expense of $25,052.94, which was $5,000 above the cost of the previous fiscal year, due in part to the late spring freshets of 1939, causing the purchases of large quantities of alum and chlorine to clarify and purify.

In conclusion, Commissioner Edwards states that the objective for the present year is the installation of two miles of six-inch and eight-inch water mains. With the completion of this proposed project, a number of new sections will have been provided with water service, disintegrated small lines will have been replaced, and a number of dead end lines eliminated, thus affording a more complete circulating system.

Where the GOP Will Pick Its Man

Here's the part of Philadelphia that will interest delegates to the Republican national convention, opening June 24. The $5,350,000 convention hall is in the back yard of the University of Pennsylvania and only 10 minutes' ride from mid-city hotels. Nearby is Franklin Field, where President Roosevelt delivered his nomination acceptance speech in 1936. The Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Republican headquarters, is only a short walk from Independence Hall, where the Declaration of Independence was signed. In Philadelphia, too, is the Betsy Ross house, where the first American flag was made.

Outdoor Wedding Ceremony Always A Pretty Affair

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage. — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

We still have our little superstitions—breaking mirrors, Friday the 13th, and May weddings—but May is now well past, and from Maine to California marriage license bureaus have been doing a land-office business. All over the country we have our annual rush of June weddings.

June is brides' month. In answer to innumerable inquiries addressed to this column concerning indoor and outdoor weddings, please let me say that outdoor wedding, if it can be managed, is always lovely.

A wedding in a garden with flowers actually blooming is something to remember. Even a sizeable back yard can be converted into a charming background for the June ceremony. To be practical, June weddings are economical. The white dress may be as simple as you please and can be worn all during the summer. Organdy, silk crepe, rayon sheers, voiles, white of all description is suitable — anything but the heavy slipper satin is in good taste for the informal wedding, whether it is held in the house or out-of-doors.

Is Becoming

The bouffant skirt, with its suggestion of yesteryear, is adorably becoming to youthful figures. A short veil adds an extra bride-like touch, and the entire outfit can be had for less than the usual going-away gown that girls bent on economy often select.

When the wedding is informal, the groom may choose either white flannels, or white washable suit with white shirt, white buckskin shoes, and a striped tie showing a dash of color—preferably blue, if the bride's bouquet has a few blue flowers. The best man wears white flannel trousers and dark blue flannel jacket. Or he may reverse this order and wear a white coat and dark trousers, though authorities say the former is preferable.

Groom and best man wear coat flowers, but not too large a bouquet, please. The wedding collation may be served indoors, and need be nothing more than a good fruit punch, dainty sandwiches, and the wedding cake, of which the bride cuts the first slice. Ice cream and coffee, if desired.

Charming but Expensive

The other day a dear old lady wrote me such a nice letter, saying she was making her grand-daughter a wedding cake from a recipe that had been in her family since Colonial days. It sounded terribly elaborate to me, being the old-fashioned pound-for-pound recipe with a dozen eggs, a pound of flour, pound of citron, pound of raisins, two pounds of sugar, a pound of blanched almonds, a gill of brandy, and lots and lots of more things. But as we've been discussing an economical wedding, this pound-for-pound cake would certainly bring up the price.

It's a charming bit of sentiment to have one's grandmother make the wedding cake from an old family recipe, but it's distinctly more economical to leave the order at a reliable confectioner's.

I shall be very glad to answer any questions about weddings, June or otherwise. I have a little leaflet on the subject, which may be obtained by sending me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope.

Feet Should Be Given the Best Care Possible

Need More Attention in the Spring and Early Summer

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The feet, like every other part of the body, should be given care at all times, but it seems in the spring and early summer they need more care than usual. This year abnormal temperatures throughout nearly all sections of the country, and hard rains, cause many feet to ache, especially when rubbers, overshoes and heavy footwear are discarded.

In children, the prevention of foot defects should be stressed and it is the objective of the National Foot Health Council to point out the necessity and proper method of doing this. In school examinations in large cities, an average of seventy-six per cent of boys and girls of high school age were found foot defective; some with corns, others with ingrown nails, some with weak arches, and many showing marked tendencies to the developing of large joints, hammer toes and bunions. Corns and ingrown toenails are not serious in themselves but they probably mean that proper footwear is not being used.

The healthiest of all feet are found in those who go barefooted. True, they have calluses but these are not the same as corns. For children, at this time of the year, nothing could be healthier than to encourage them to go bare-footed around the house, in the yard and on beaches. Any cuts or abrasions that they get should be treated antiseptically, but these are minor disadvantages compared to the advantage which is gained in the strengthening of the feet, improvement in arch support and functional efficiency.

Stress Proper Care

Another objective of the Council is industrial foot care through the advancement of programs directed to men and women whose employment keeps them on their feet. The program stresses, first, correct footwear and second, proper foot care.

Chiropodists and podiatrists are now quite scientifically trained and have a century of service behind them. The first chiropody office was opened in Boston in 1840. This year the National Association of Chiropodists will observe the centennial during its annnual conventionn in Boston.

Foot care is not a luxury limited to a few, it can be enjoyed by persons in all walks of life and at all ages. Throughout this land there are foot clinics, many of them in first-class hospitals, where chiropodists and podiatrists are available to care for the foot problems of men, women and children regardless of their circumstances. Don't neglect your feet. Don't wait until they have become a major problem. Too often minor defects go unntreated and disregarded until they become of crippling proportions.

It is not unusual for foot troubles to react on the entire system. Many women who are fatigued by a shopping trip, get that way from faulty foot posture.

Questions and Answers

A. B. T.: "What effect have epsom salts on the body in a bath?"

Answer: Practically none. They are sometimes advised because they are thought to reduce weight but this is not true. Of course, if the bath is salt enough it removes fluid from the body, but if so it is unsafe. Epsom salts in a concentrated solution, saturated on a cloth, are valuable in the relief of pain locally, but externally there is no other use.

E. G.: "Let me know if there is any harm in taking bismuth for a long time."

Answer: Yes. Bismuth produces a chronic metallis poisoning with deposits in the gums and degentration of the blood. It should not be taken except on the advice of a physician.

M. M.: "Members of my family will not eat potatoes nor macaroni; and very litle sugar on their cereal and in coffee; nor white bread. I have tried to make them eat what I considered a well balanced diet."

Answer: If people are healthy and happy do not try to influence their diet. Starches and sugars and macaroni are simply concentrated, processed carbohydrates that your family will get in vegetables, fruits, cereals, and probably be better off.

L. S.: "Please advise what is the best time of the year to have a child's tonsils taken out?"

Answer—There is no time any better than any other. The best time is when you are certain the tonsils are doing harm. In other words, the best time of year to take the tonsils out is when the tonsils need to be taken out. Of course, usually August and September are the busy times of year for the tonsil doctor because parents feel that it benefits children to have their tonnsils out before going to school.

N. G. L.—"Please tell me if there is quinine in grapefruit."

Answer—Not to the best of my knowledge and belief. The bitterness comes from a special vegetable acid.

CHAPTER FORTY

OLD MR. MERRIFIELD learned of the plans for the new play and was delighted with them. He had never heard of any sort of dramatic presentation in the outdoors; the very thought was exciting to him.

"Mr. Weems, where are you, sir?" he called to his secretary who had hovered near the conference this morning. The secretary came forward respectfully. "Mr. Weems, how long since our tennis courts have been reconditioned?"

"The tennis courts, sir?"

"Certainly, certainly! The tennis courts!" The old millionaire glared, spoke loudly. "We have tennis courts here at The Oaks, Mr. Weems, haven't we?"

"Oh, of course, sir. But it has been—oh, quite some years—since anyone has used them."

"Regrettable, Mr. Weems. There are two courts. I often walk past them. My daughter used them frequently. I have observed that they are in poor shape. Holes in them. Worn out, no doubt. Mr. Weems, see that they are rebuilt immediately. Rebuilt, sir. You hear?"

"Oh, of course, sir."

"The best of materials, Mr. Weems. Whatever is needed. And —several hundred seats for guests. As many as Mr. Bailey thinks he may need for his play, sir. Perhaps, ah—" his old eyes sparkled with devilment—"perhaps I can use my influence with Mr. Bailey and the girls to get you into the play free, Mr. Weems."

"Oh, no, sir. I shall, of course, purchase admission. I do not wish to—"

"Tut, tut, Mr. Weems. When you can get into a theater free, get in. You hear me?"

"Oh, of course, sir!" Poor Mr. Weems was a literalist. Not until he had observed the others all laughing at him did he realize they had been teasing, and even then he was slightly confused. He stood in perpetual awe of the man who was at the same time his employer and friend. But when Gayle squeezed his arm, he smiled happily.

"Both of you old dears scat out of here," she ordered. "You know good and well you'll be in the best possible seats in the front row. I—" She dropped to a stage whisper. "I'll slip you in myself!"

The play had been written and re-written in "final" form, so that parts could be typed and given to the various actors. Bill wrote in at least some part, as before, for each of the seven girls now in the Merrifield household, and arranged for both himself and Jeremy Tucker to play dual roles. Jeremy had to be a youth in Acts I and II, and a college professor in Act III. He had more to do than he had had in the first play.

The new al fresco production, however, was only a part of the excitement planned for The Oaks. Preparation of it soon was going on apace, but so were preparations for the magnificent reception and ball scheduled for that same evening.

The date was less than a month away. Society editors from the newspapers, keeping in close touch with The Oaks now, began early to mention the preparations, and Mrs. Molly Van Orsdale learned first that the play was to be outdoors. On next Sunday morning, Page One of her society section carried an eight-column headline: "AL FRESCO DRAMA TO BE REVIVED AT MERRIFIELD ESTATE."

The sub-heading said that "Brilliant Reception Included in Plans for Staging 'The Wit to Woo'."

Mrs. Molly knew that they would be of major interest to the high-hat stratum of society life, and so worded her article with that in mind. There is a subtle difference in society news coverages —things for the elite can be stated one way, things for the mass public another. Mrs. Molly went quite snooty, with her tongue in her cheek; she was well aware that the high hats had been high-hatted at The Oaks a few weeks ago, and she wanted to see what would happen next.

In a moment Gayle was in his arms.

So, apparently, did practically everybody else in the city. A great many people telephoned in. Committees from five different charities called on Mr. Merrifield asking that some of the proceeds from the play be diverted to their organizations. He referred them all to Bill Bailey. More than 100 applications for tickets to the play came to The Oaks in the mail, and poor Graham, the butler, was so busy with telephone calls about tickets, and about details of the play in general, that he hired an assistant to help him.

Bill and Gayle learned of these things promptly, but they were more and more busy with rehearsals again, with costuming, lighting of the outdoor stages, makeup, acoustics, all the problems that assail directors and managers of any play plus the additional ones that nag at amateurs.

Cholly Farrington's gossipy column in the Chronicle-Post came out with a lifted-eyebrows paragraph or two concerning the activity at The Oaks.

"Draw up a rocker, my dears," he chatted. "Have you heard? About the Merrifield Oaks?" The maid to measure, it seems, was duly measured, and so was the public taste. Whereupon, 'The Wit to Woo' is being concocted at the same stand.

"If this were anything but pure charity, or if Mr. M. were anything but pure generosity, this might all be open to suspicion. Not so, though. It's a little early to reveal the insidest information—but your humble correspondent humbly submits that there are still seven beautiful girls headquartering in the big house on Montrose, not to mention a young dramatic genius and a millionaire grandson. Anything can happen there. Very probably it will. Stand by for further instructions."

Meanwhile, too, some "outside" young people had begun to drop in at The Oaks. The first party given in Jeremy's honor had been largely framed up for him by the other youths there who invited their friends. But Jeremy had chanced to meet a few of the guests later in a roadhouse. And Gayle had tactfully called a few of the others on the telephone for him.

On a Friday afternoon after the rehearsals were started, and after the papers had informed the world about the new play, a carload of young people rolled up the long drive to The Oaks. A detached observer might have said that it came up diffidently, almost warily; plainly the driver wasn't too sure of himself. The Oaks was truly an awesome estate.

No one was in sight when the youths stopped near the front porch. Presently the car gave a tentative honk.

Graham, punctilious butler, saw them from within. "It appears, Miss Gayle, that some young guests are waiting in an automob'l out front. Shall I—?" Graham wasn't too sure of himself, either.

"Oh! No, Graham, let me go and —no, call Mr. Jeremy at once—JEREMY!" She didn't wait for Graham to call; she herself yelled out in quite spontaneous manner.

Jeremy heard and came down. Out of sheer curiosity some of the other girls came into the front room there, too, and even Bill came in.

"Jeremy, somebody's honking for you," Gayle reported.

"For—me?"

"Go out and see!"

He looked distressed. His eyes sought Gayle's in appealing, but she pushed him toward the door, smiling at the others.

He went out. Bill and the girls quite shamelessly peeked to watch him, but all they saw was that Jeremy talked a moment, got in the car and drove away.

"He's making progress," Bill murmured. Gayle nodded.

Because by chance Tempe Hyde was nearest them, they both turned and happened to look unexpectedly at Tempe, side view. The expression she wore was so startling to them that Bill and Gayle involuntarily looked at each other again, questioningly.

Presently, when they were alone again, Bill spoke in low tones to Gayle. "Say, do you know something. I don't quite get this Hyde girl. She can be cute as a paper doll one moment, and darn near frightening the next. Did—did you notice? Over there?"

Gayle nodded, very seriously. "I suppose it's all imagination, Bill. Probably we're all a little tired from studying the play all day. Can't we do something different now? Let's dance!"

He switched on the controls of the magnificent new photograph, and in a moment Gayle was in his arms. The other girls heard the music and came in. So did Mr. Weems and Mr. Merrifield. This was a late afternoon hour now, when people were naturally anxious to assemble for sociability. Bill had asked the six girls to stay for dinner at The Oaks and a try-out of the play afterward.

All at once Tempe was a bubbly girl again. She ran to Mr. Merrifield, hugged him and laughingly forced him to try to dance a few steps with her. He enjoyed it immensely, connived with her then to dance with Mr. Weems.

Tempe carried out her part so admirably, teasing and yet being respectful, creating a mood that the two old gentlemen enjoyed, that Bill smiled in apology to Gayle.

"Guess I had the wrong slant," said he. "Tempe is a honey, really. But it's you I'm dancing with, Gayle."

Civilian Defense Program Strongly Urged by Dewey

New Yorker Scores New Deal in Burlington, Vt. Address

BURLINGTON, VT., June 18 (AP) — Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, advocated here the creation of a nation-wide "civilian defense" program under which all citizens would be told specifically what part they would play if this country were attacked.

Criticizing the national defense activities of the Roosevelt administration, the New York district attorney told a mass meeting sponsored by the Vermont Republican Central Committee that there should be an immediate "house-cleaning."

He hit specifically at the secretaries of war, navy, commerce and labor, asserted that the administration is still riddled with communists and fellow-travelers, and added:

"We cannot wait until January. This whole crew of fuzzy-minded theorists should be dispensed with. This administration needs a house-cleaning right now. And the American people should demand it."

Declaring "the menace of total war demands total defense," Dewey contended that with proper organization not only the United States but the entire hemisphere could be "made impregnable to any assault."

A jury of six men and six women returned its verdict against Mrs. Lillian Dorfman without leaving the jury box after her counsel unexpectedly announced that she had decided to plead guilty.

Mrs. Dorfman had testified she drowned her daughter Diana, because of a quarrel with her husband and also tried to drown another daughter, Norma, 10.

Do You Plan Your Life?

Mr. Frank Mattingly Mr. Jacob Hafer Mr. John Hafer

Thoughtful persons plan their life for the utmost happiness and contentment. To most of them, this includes insurance for the future security of dependents.

Prearranged funeral services are a natural step in such a plan, a form of insurance many have adopted. By selecting a funeral director in advance, needless worry and expense are spared those left behind.

We will gladly explain this procedure upon request.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

When transplanting late in the season with the possibility of a spell of dry weather setting in, special precautions should be taken to have ample moisture available for each plant's roots. Before attempting to set the plant in the new hole which has been dug for it, fill the hole with water and allow it to seep into the soil. If the ground seems particularly dry the hole should be filled with water two or three times to assure bottom moisture for the roots of the transplanted plant.

Another method of furnishing enough moisture for a newly placed plant is to water it from a bottle, as shown in today's Garden-Graph. To do this, fill a quart milk bottle with water, turn it upside down, and push it neck first into the loose soil close to the plant. The water will seep into the soil from the inverted bottle, slowly giving the plant needed moisture over a two-day period.

Feet Should Be Given the Best Care Possible

Need More Attention in the Spring and Early Summer

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The feet, like every other part of the body, should be given care at all times, but it seems in the spring and early summer they need more care than usual. This year abnormal temperatures throughout nearly all sections of the country, and hard rains, cause many feet to ache, especially when rubbers, overshoes and heavy footwear are discarded.

In children, the prevention of foot defects should be stressed and it is the objective of the National Foot Health Council to point out the necessity and proper method of doing this. In school examinations in large cities, an average of seventy-six per cent of boys and girls of high school age were found foot defective; some with corns, others with ingrown nails, some with weak arches, and many showing marked tendencies to the developing of large joints, hammer toes and bunions. Corns and ingrown toenails are not serious in themselves but they probably mean that proper footwear is not being used.

The healthiest of all feet are found in those who go barefooted. True, they have calluses but these are not the same as corns. For children, at this time of the year, nothing could be healthier than to encourage them to go bare-footed around the house, in the yard and on beaches. Any cuts or abrasions that they get should be treated antiseptically, but these are minor disadvantages compared to the advantage which is gained in the strengthening of the feet, improvewent in arch support and functional efficiency.

Stress Proper Care

Another objective of the Council is industrial foot care through the advancement of programs directed to men and women whose employment keeps them on their feet. The program stresses, first, correct footwear and second, proper foot care.

Chiropodists and podiatrists are now quite scientifically trained and have a century of service behind them. The first chiropody office was opened in Boston in 1840. This year the National Association of Chiropodists will observe the centennial during its annnual conventionn in Boston.

Foot care is not a luxury limited to a few, it can be enjoyed by persons in all walks of life and at all ages. Throughout this land there are foot clinics, many of them in first-class hospitals, where chiropodists and podiatrists are available to care for the foot problems of men, women and children regardless of their circumstances. Don't neglect your feet. Don't wait until they have become a major problem. Too often minor defects go unntreated and disregarded until they become of crippling proportions.

It is not unusual for foot troubles to react on the entire system. Many women who are fatigued by a shopping trip, get that way from faulty foot posture.

Questions and Answers

A. B. T.: "What effect have epsom salts on the body in a bath?"

Answer: Practically none. They are sometimes advised because they are thought to reduce weight but this is not true. Of course, if the bath is salt enough it removes fluid from the body, but if so it is unsafe. Epsom salts in a concentrated solution, saturated on a cloth, are valuable in the relief of pain locally, but externally there is no other use.

E. G.: "Let me know if there is any harm in taking bismuth for a long time."

Answer: Yes. Bismuth produces a chronic metallis poisoning with deposits in the gums and degentration of the blood. It should not be taken except on the advice of a physician.

M. M.: "Members of my family will not eat potatoes nor macaroni; and very litle sugar on their cereal and in coffee; nor white bread. I have tried to make them eat what I considered a well balanced diet."

Answer: If people are healthy and happy do not try to influence their diet. Starches and sugars and macaroni are simply concentrated, processed carbohydrates that your family will get in vegetables, fruits, cereals, and probably be better off.

L. S.: "Please advise what is the best time of the year to have a child's tonsils taken out?"

Answer—There is no time any better than any other. The best time is when you are certain the tonsils are doing harm. In other words, the best time of year to take the tonsils out is when the tonsils need to be taken out. Of course, usually August and September are the busy times of year for the tonsil doctor because parents feel that it benefits children to have their tonnsils out before going to school.

N. G. L.—"Please tell me if there is quinine in grapefruit."

Answer—Not to the best of my knowledge and belief. The bitterness comes from a special vegetable acid.

Mother Sentenced To Life in Prison

MEDIA, Pa., June 18 (AP)—A 28-year-old mother was convicted in a seven-hour trial today of drowning her seven-year-old daughter in a bathtub and was immediately sentenced to life in prison.

A jury of six men and six women returned its verdict against Mrs. Lillian Dorfman without leaving the jury box after her counsel unexpectedly announced that she had decided to plead guilty.

Mrs. Dorfman had testified she drowned her daughter Diana, because of a quarrel with her husband and also tried to drown another daughter, Norma, 10.

Do You Plan Your Life?

Mr. Frank Mattingly Mr. Jacob Hafer Mr. John Hafer

Thoughtful persons plan their life for the utmost happiness and contentment. To most of them, this includes insurance for the future security of dependents.

Prearranged funeral services are a natural step in such a plan, a form of insurance many have adopted. By selecting a funeral director in advance, needless worry and expense are spared those left behind.

We will gladly explain this procedure upon request.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

When transplanting late in the season with the possibility of a spell of dry weather setting in, special precautions should be taken to have ample moisture available for each plant's roots. Before attempting to set the plant in the new hole which has been dug for it, fill the hole with water and allow it to seep into the soil. If the ground seems particularly dry the hole should be filled with water two or three times to assure bottom moisture for the roots of the transplanted plant.

Another method of furnishing enough moisture for a newly placed plant is to water it from a bottle, as shown in today's Garden-Graph. To do this, fill a quart milk bottle with water, turn it upside down, and push it neck first into the loose soil close to the plant. The water will seep into the soil from the inverted bottle, slowly giving the plant needed moisture over a two-day period.

Russia had more casualties in the first World War than any other belligerent.

New Lincoln Chapter Is Brought to Screen

Frank McGlynn, Sr., who has given many striking film depictions of chapters from the life of Abraham Lincoln, brings a new and hitherto undone chapter to the screen in "The Mad Empress", a film produced and directed by Miguel C. Torres, for a Vitagraph release now showing at the New Liberty theater.

In "The Mad Empress" Lincoln is shown in a conversation with the American Secretary of State Seward at the close of the American Civil War, during which the great president expresses his sympathy for Mexico's fight to throw off the yoke of France and the Austrian arch-duke, Maximilian von Habsburg, who has been set upon a throne in Mexico and proclaimed the Mexican emperor.

When Lincoln issues instructions that the American ambassador in Paris shall notify Napoleon III that the United States will not allow the French and Austrian invasion of New World sovereignty, the doom of the Mexican emperor is sealed. Not even the intervention of American arms is needed to force the withdrawal of French troops after Lincoln's warning is given to Europe.

Drama Is Offered At the Strand

Drama reigns in "Four Sons," now at the Strand theater.

In the cast are Don Ameche, Mary Beth Hughes, Alan Curtis, George Ernest, Lionel Royce and Sig Rumann.

The original screen play was prepared for the film by John Howard Lawson which was suggested by a story by I. A. R. Wylie.

Florence Bogar, whose underwater swimming feats for the movies have oftentimes been publicize and pictured in the American Weekly, will be seen in person on the Stand stage in the role of the beautiful Cleopatra in "Egyptian Follies," which shows Friday and Saturday at the Strand.

Miss Bogar has had roles in fifty-four movie features and short subjects, including underwater moveis made at Silver Springs, Fla.

IN COMEDY FEATURE

Ray Milland is co-starred with Loretta Young in Columbia's "The Doctor Takes a Wife," comedy of a girl who writes books in praise of spinsterhood "married" to a doctor who hates career women. The picture opens tomorrow at the Maryland Theater.

Garden Offers Western And First Run Picture

Cesar Romero makes his debut as the Cisco Kid in the western picture opening today at the Garden, "The Cisco Kid and the Lady," and gives an effective interpretation of the likeable outlaw, suggested by the O'Henry creation. The picture abounds with action and there's plenty of romance. Others in the cast include Virginia Fields, Marjorie Weaver and Gloria Ann White.

The co-feature at the Garden is the first-run picture, "Everything on Ice", in which the young skating star, Irene Dare, is given every opportunity to prove her prowess on the ice. The cast includes Roscoe Karns, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Roberts, Eric Linden and Mary Hart.

Comedy Ends Run Today at Maryland

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy, "The Ghost Comes Home," starring Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, Ann Rutherford and Nat Pendleton, closes today at the Maryland theater.

A Buster Keaton comedy, a sports short and a news reel are also on the bill.

Action Serial Is At the Embassy

Action scenes in "Drums of Fu Manchu," the first episode of which is currently playing at the Embassy theater, are said to be haymakers that are 100 per cent genuine on both the giving and the receiving end.

Robert Kellard plays the virile Allan Parker, with William Royle as Dennis Nayland Smith, and Henry Brandon in the title role of the chapter-play.

Also at the Embassy are a return showing of "South of the Border;" with Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Nick Carter, Master Detective," starring Walter Pidgeon and Rita Johnson.

Says Parachutists Killed Three Generals

Washington, June 18 (AP)—German parachute troops 'assassinated' three French generals in their own headquarters, Count Rene De Chambrun asserted here.

The Count, descendant of LaFayette and honorary citizen of this country, served as liaison officer between the French army and the British expeditionary force in Flanders.

He attributed the French army's defeat in an interview today entirely to the Nazis' "fifth column" activities, and said that "we weren't fighting the same war—we did not use the same methods."

Count De Chambrun declined to name the three generals killed by parachute troops but said he knew the incidents to be a fact.

Tax Commission To 'Crack Down' On Md. Counties

Law Governing Assessment of Foreign Corporations Violated

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP) — The State Tax Commission has been compelled to "crack down" on several counties and incorporated towns in Maryland for violation of a new law governing assessment of foreign corporations, chairman Harry O. Levin, disclosed.

At the same time, Levin announced results of a reassessment in Montgomery county showed an increase of nearly $30,000,000 in that county's assessable basis and could be described as "typical" of results anticipated from other county reassessments.

Levin said the new statute on foreign corporations required the state tax commission to determine valuation on all personal property of such companies in Maryland. The twenty-third counties and some 140 incorporated towns formerly made individual assessments on such property in their jurisdiction.

Commission Fixes Values

The commission now establishes the property values in each county and town on a uniform basis, Levin said, notifies the sub-division involved of the value set, and instructs it to make its levy on that basis only.

"Several towns and counties have attempted to continue their own assessments despite the law," Levin asserted, "and we have been required to write peremptory letters ordering the practice stopped and the valuation rescinded."

Under the old system, he said, it was possible for the property of a company to be valued at one figure by a town and at another by a county. It was possible for a firm to receive tax bills from twenty-three counties and 140 towns, all levying on substantially different bases.

Some 1,500 foreign corporations are covered by the new law, which took effect Jan. 1. Levin said its administration by the tax commission should produce considerably more revenue, establish uniformity, and increase efficiency.

Get Sworn Statements

"We get a true report from each company each year, under oath," he explained. "Our staff is better qualified to make the needed analysis and valuations and the companies will have more respect for the state commission than for a county assessor.

Turning to the Montgomery county reassessment, Levin said the new figures showed a total taxable basis of $146,842,079 in that county, compared with $117,784,600 in 1938.

A sharp increase along the same line could be reasonably expected from reassessments in other counties with large Metropolitan areas such as Baltimore, Washington, Prince Georges, Allegany and Frederick—with patricular emphasis on Baltimore county, Levin asserted.

The law says it should be assessed at its full face value—and that's what this commission intends to do."

For centuries the diamond was the peculiar property of the Orient. Western travelers brought back amazing stories of the magnificence of eastern potentates, of their gorgeous and fantastic jewels, among which diamonds held a predominant place.

FEATURED IN FILM

"Four Sons," Twentieth Century-Fox drama, features Eugene Leontovich, as the mother, and (from top down) Don Ameche, Alan Curtis, Robert Lowery, and George Ernest as her boys. The feature is billed at the Strand Theater.

Uruguay Closing In on the Nazis

MONTEVIDEO, URUGUAY, June 18 (AP)—Nine Germans are under arrest here as an investigating committee prepared a report to Congress on wide ramifications of Nazi activities which the report traced directly to Otto Langmann, German minister to Uruguay, and his immediate aides.

Government sources said Julio Daldorf, chief of Nazi units in this country, may be asked to leave the country.

The government commission, whose appointment was the first step taken to counteract "fifth columnists" in South America, was said in informed circles to have prepared a report making the following charges:

1. There exists in Uruguay a perfectly prepared Nazi organizaztion which depends for its direction upon the German legation.

2. A propaganda group exists in every German school in Uruguay.

3. A complete plan for infiltration of Nazi followers through every phase of Uruguayan life has been put into effect through various German centers and their affiliates.

The 1940 Arizona "cotton king" is Sam Joy of Glendale, who harvested 728 pounds of American-Egyptian cotton per acre on his 40-acre farm.

Stock Market Traders Cautious Because of European Situation

Prices Irregular, but Some Issues Close Fairly Strong

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Most stock market traders kept commitments at a minimum in today's session, pending further light on European war troubles, but the general direction of prices was upward.

Led by steels, rails, rubber and specialties, the list made its best showing in the morning when gains of fractions to around three points were posted for favorites.

After mid-day prices began to wilt and volume dwindle, with the result that the principle morning climbers were enabled to emerge with only infinitesimal portions of their early upswing. In addition, losses running to a point or so were to be seen here and there.

The Associated Press average held a net upturn of .2 of a point at 41.1. Transfers of 718,810 shares compared with 1,208,330 yesterday.

Stemming the buying tide was the evident desire of many in Wall Street to await Hitler-Mussolini peace terms to France.

American airlines, Eastern Air Lines and Allied Chemical got up 1 to 3 points. Unchanged to moderately higher were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Chrysler, Goodrich, Goodyear, Sears Roebuck and others.

Up to a point or so in the Curb were Jones & Laughlin, N. J. Zinc, Pennsylvania-Central Air Lines and Aluminum of America. Under water Pantepec, Bell Aircraft, American Gas, American Cyanamid "B" and Brewster Aero. The turnover here was around 109,000 shares against 168,000 the day before.

Farm Export Market Virtually Lost

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Milo R. Perkins, president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, said here that war had virtually wiped out this country's $800,000,000 farm export market and, consequently, threatened the nation with "a disaster of the first water."

He appealed to the National Association of Retail Grocers convention to push surplus food stocks and thus help to relieve the "desperate" situation confronting the American farmer.

Loss of the foreign agricultural market, he declared, would vitally affect one-fourth of the country's population—the farm families—and therefore become "a national problem that is going to touch your pocket book and mine."

A Boston radio station once broadcast the antics of a troupe of trained flees just arrived from Europe. The trainer spoke for the insects, telling of their tastes and eccentricities, and how they enjoyed the voyage.

The Spanish explorer, Coronado, brought the first horses, cattle and sheep into what is now the United States in 1540.

Fall of France Does Not Lessen Red Cross Needs

Individuals Aiding Drive Are Named

With the threat of French capitulation to the German forces, and the effect it could have on the administration of Red Cross relief to war wounded and the millions of civilian refugees, Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, has sent the following telegram to the local war relief headquarters.

"While conditions for rendering relief may change, the policy of the American Red Cross remains the same. Cessation of hostilities in France does not diminish the terrible suffering and needs of refugees. We, therefore, intend to continue to extend all possible relief but only upon condition that we have liberty of action and protection so as to insure that our aid goes solely to those French men, women and children and the refugees for which it is intended. There are already great needs for American Red Cross assistance in England. These will doubtless increase in the near future. Our campaign for funds must go forward. I am confident that our people will continue to trust their Red Cross to do its best to relieve human suffering under the changing conditions of the world today."

Mrs. George Henderson, chairman of the Allegany County chapter stated that the telegram was confirmed by telephone to Washington yesterday. "The last few days have increased the refugee problem enormously and there is no question but that the necessary arrangements will be made at once. Contributors may be assured that their gifts will reach the proper destination." Mrs. Henderson said following the telephone conversation.

The local chapter passed the $5000 mark in the national drive for war relief funds of the American Red Cross last Saturday. The following is a list of individual contributors to the Allegany fund, issued yesterday from the war relief headquarters, 45 North Liberty street. Officials of the drive stated that it should be remembered that many are contributing through organizations and these donations are listed separately, as are business firms.

"It is hoped that everyone in the county will give an individual gift as well as supporting all Red Cross benefits. The need is so great that only in this way can the quota assigned to the county be reached," said Mrs. Henderson.

CRAZED BY PILES?
Here's What to Do for Pain and Itching of Simple Piles!

Simple Piles can almost drive you crazy with their itching and their soreness. They can make your nights a horror and your days a torture.

Here's what to do for the distress of simple Piles — the maddening itching and the wracking pain. Apply amazing Pazo Ointment. Pazo really works. It really relieves the itching; really relieves the pain and soreness.

Here's why Pazo works. Here's why it gets results. First, it soothes the sore and inflamed parts. That relieves the itching and the pain. Second, Pazo lubricates the affected parts. That softens the hardened and dried parts and helps prevent cracking and soreness. Third, it has an astringent action that tends to reduce the swollen parts and, in many cases, check bleeding.

This threefold effect gives real results in the alleviation of simple Piles.

Try Pazo and see the results you get. Note the relief from the itching and pain. If Pazo does not give you satisfactory relief, see a doctor as your condition may be such as to require a physician's services.

Get Pazo Ointment at any drugstore at small cost. (It also comes in suppository form for those who prefer.)

Prices Irregular, but Some Issues Close Fairly Strong

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Most stock market traders kept commitments at a minimum in today's session, pending further light on European war troubles, but the general direction of prices was upward.

Led by steels, rails, rubber and specialties, the list made its best showing in the morning when gains of fractionc to around three points were posted for favorites.

After mid-day prices began to wilt and volume dwindle, with the result that the principle morning climbers were enabled to emerge with only infinitesimal portions of their early upswing. In addition, losses running to a point or so were to be seen here and there.

The Associated Press average held a net upturn of .2 of a point at 41.1. Transfers of 718,810 shares compared with 1,208,330 yesterday.

Stemming the buying tide was the evident desire of many in Wall Street to await Hitler-Mussolini peace terms to France.

American airlines, Eastern Air Lines and Allied Chemical got up 1 to 3 points. Unchanged to moderately higher were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Chrysler, Goodrich, Goodyear, Sears Roebuck and others.

Up to a point or so in the Curb were Jones & Laughlin, N. J. Zinc, Pennsylvania-Central Air Lines and Aluminum of America. Under water Pantepec, Bell Aircraft, American Gas, American Cyanamid "B" and Brewster Aero. The turnover here was around 109,000 shares against 168,000 the day before.

Farm Export Market Virtually Lost

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Milo R. Perkins, president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, said here that war had virtually wiped out this country's $800,000,000 farm export market and, consequently, threatened the nation with "a disaster of the first water."

He appealed to the National Association of Retail Grocers convention to push surplus food stocks and thus help to relieve the "desperate" situation confronting the American farmer.

Loss of the foreign agricultural market, he declared, would vitally affect one-fourth of the country's population—the farm families—and therefore become "a national problem that is going to touch your pocket book and mine."

A Boston radio station once broadcast the antics of a troupe of trained flees just arrived from Europe. The trainer spoke for the insects, telling of their tastes and eccentricities, and how they enjoyed the voyage.

The Spanish explorer, Coronado, brought the first horses, cattle and sheep into what is now the United States in 1540.

Individuals Aiding Drive Are Named

With the threat of French capitulation to the German forces, and the effect it could have on the administration of Red Cross relief to war wounded and the millions of civilian refugees, Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, has sent the following telegram to the local war relief headquarters.

"While conditions for rendering relief may change, the policy of the American Red Cross remains the same. Cessation of hostilities in France does not diminish the terrible suffering and needs of refugees. We, therefore, intend to continue to extend all possible relief but only upon condition that we have liberty of action and protection so as to insure that our aid goes solely to those French men, women and children and the refugees for which it is intended. There are already great needs for American Red Cross assistance in England. These will doubtless increase in the near future. Our campaign for funds must go forward. I am confident that our people will continue to trust their Red Cross to do its best to relieve human suffering under the changing conditions of the world today."

Mrs. George Henderson, chairman of the Allegany County chapter, stated that the telegram was confirmed by telephone to Washington yesterday. "The last few days have increased the refugee problem enormously and there is no question but that the necessary arrangements will be made at once. Contributors may be assured that their gifts will reach the proper destination." Mrs. Henderson said following the telephone conversation.

The local chapter passed the $5000 mark in the national drive for war relief funds of the American Red Cross last Saturday. The following is a list of individual contributors to the Allegany fund, issued yesterday from the war relief headquarters, 45 North Liberty street. Officials of the drive stated that it should be remembered that many are contributing through organizations and these donations are listed separately, as are business firms.

"It is hoped that everyone in the county will give an individual gift as well as supporting all Red Cross benefits. The need is so great that only in this way can the quota assigned to the county be reached," said Mrs. Henderson.

CRAZED BY PILES?
Here's What to Do for Pain and Itching of Simple Piles!

Simple Piles can almost drive you crazy with their itching and their soreness. They can make your nights a horror and your days a torture.

Here's what to do for the distress of simple Piles — the maddening itching and the wracking pain. Apply amazing Pazo Ointment. Pazo really works. It really relieves the itching; really relieves the pain and soreness.

Here's why Pazo works. Here's why it gets results. First, it soothes the sore and inflamed parts. That relieves the itching and the pain. Second, Pazo lubricates the affected parts. That softens the hardened and dried parts and helps prevent cracking and soreness. Third, it has an astringent action that tends to reduce the swollen parts and, in many cases, check bleeding.

Pazo is neatly and thoroughly applied with small, perforated tube

This threefold effect gives real results in the alleviation of simple Piles.

Try Pazo and see the results you get. Note the relief from the itching and pain. If Pazo does not give you satisfactory relief, see a doctor as your condition may be such as to require a physician's services.

Get Pazo Ointment at any drugstore at small cost. (It also comes in suppository form for those who prefer.)

100 Percent Increase in American Coal Exports for 1940 Predicted

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 18 (AP)—A probable 100 per cent increase in American coal exports for 1940, mostly from the busy fields of Southern West Virginia, was envisioned today by operators.

April and May export tonnage—two-thirds of it moving to South American ports—was more than double that of 1939.

J. V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal Association, said nothing indicated any downward trend for the rest of this year.

The entrance of Italy into the European war may cut overseas shipments a little, but April exports to that country amounted to only 28,000 tons and the May figure was 21,000 tons.

During April the tonnage moving from Hampton Roads, Virginia, to foreign ports was 271,938. In May it was 251,584.

This represents all coal exports from the Eastern Seaboard, except for 20,000 to 30,000 tons monthly from Baltimore, Philadelphia and New Orleans.

The bulk of Hampton Roads coal comes from the Southern mining district—the Pocahontas, Tug River, and Winding Gulf fields of Southern West Virginia. Northern West Virginia mines send their export coal to Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Some coal has been moving to Italy, Switzerland, Portugal, Spain and other European nations, but by far the most of it is being shipped to Argentina, Brazil and Chile.

"Movement of coal from Virginia ports to South America in all probability will continue at the rate established in the last few months and possibly may be increased," Sullivan said.

Should exports remain at present levels it would mean a year's total of between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 tons, or around ten percent of the Southern district's output.

The Coal Exporters' Association, in a bulletin, noted that decreased production and increased industrial demands in Chile had resulted in shipments of around 40,000 tons to that country for both April and May.

This, however, this association said, put pressure on the Chilean supply of dollar exchange and cannot be regarded as advantageous for normal development of Chilean-American trade.

With an eye to continued increases in shipments, West Virginia operators are supporting a proposal by Rep. John Kee, Bluefield Democrat, for addition of $10,000,000 to the deficiency bill for reconditioning and operating the laid-up fleet of the export trade.

Rep. C. A. Woodrum (D.-Va.), is chairman of the Sub-Committee on Appropriations and Deficiencies. Whether the Kee proposal gets a hearing probably will depend upon whether Congress adjourns or recesses.

Monongahela National Forest Are Now Open to the Public

PARSONS, W. Va., June 18.—Swimming at all Monongahela National Forest recreation areas is now open to the public for the season, Arthur A. Wood, supervisor of the forest announced today. Those areas include Horseshoe Recreational area, near Parsons, and Stuart Recreational area, near Elkins, and the Smoke Hole Recreational area near Petersburg.

Most of the areas have been used by the public for picnicking, and in some instances for camping, since early May, but the necessity for detailing life guards at the beaches during the swimming season, Supervisor Wood explained, limits the use of warmer facilities to the warmer summer period. The attention of the public is called to the fact that these areas are closed to the public after 11 p. m. Automobiles should be off of the area so that the gates may be locked by 1:15 p. m.

Later in the season when the outdoor recreation is in full swing, a new area will be opened at Bear Heaven on the Stuart Memorial Drive, located about midway between the Bickle Knob and Alpena Gap picnicking areas. It is reached from Route 5, turning off to the north at the entrance to Stuart recreation area, because of the regulation of traffic to one-way travel on Stuart Memorial Drive.

Injuries Are Not Serious, Doctor Says

Missouri Couple and Charleston Man Taken to Hospital

KEYSER, W. Va., June 18—Three persons were in Potomac Valley hospital today under treatment for injuries sustained when two automobiles collided on Route 50 near here late this morning.

The Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Hardgrove, Brookfield, Mo., and Chilton T. Hawkins, Charleston, were admitted to the hospital after the collision resulting from one of the cars "apparently" skidding out of control 150 yards from the Mineral-Grant county line. Hospital attendants said Mrs. Hardgrove received chest injuries.

Hawkins, who was alone in his car, was traveling west, and the Hardgrove's automobile was headed in the opposite direction.

Officers said both cars were considerably damaged.

100 Percent Increase in American Coal Exports for 1940 Predicted

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 18 (AP)—A probable 100 per cent increase in American coal exports for 1940, mostly from the busy fields of Southern West Virginia, was envisioned today by operators.

April and May export tonnage—two-thirds of it moving to South American ports—was more than double that of 1939.

J. V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal Association, said nothing indicated any downward trend for the rest of this year.

The entrance of Italy into the European war may cut overseas shipments a little, but April exports to that country amounted to only 28,000 tons and the May figure was 21,000 tons.

During April the tonnage moving from Hampton Roads, Virginia, to foreign ports was 271,938. In May it was 251,584.

This represents all coal exports from the Eastern Seaboard, except for 20,000 to 30,000 tons monthly from Baltimore, Philadelphia and New Orleans.

The bulk of Hampton Roads coal comes from the Southern mining district—the Pocahontas, Tug River, and Winding Gulf fields of Southern West Virginia. Northern West Virginia mines send their export coal to Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Some coal has been moving to Italy, Switzerland, Portugal, Spain and other European nations, but by far the most of it is being shipped to Argentina, Brazil and Chile.

"Movement of coal from Virginia ports to South America in all probability will continue at the rate established in the last few months and possibly may be increased," Sullivan said.

Should exports remain at present levels it would mean a year's total of between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 tons, or around ten percent of the Southern district's output.

The Coal Exporters' Association, in a bulletin, noted that decreased production and increased industrial demands in Chile had resulted in shipments of around 40,000 tons to that country for both April and May.

This, however, this association said, put pressure on the Chilean supply of dollar exchange and cannot be regarded as advantageous for normal development of Chilean-American trade.

With an eye to continued increases in shipments, West Virginia operators are supporting a proposal by Rep. John Kee, Bluefield Democrat, for addition of $10,000,000 to the deficiency bill for reconditioning and operating the laid-up fleet of the export trade.

Rep. C. A. Woodrum (D.-Va.), is chairman of the Sub-Committee on Appropriations and Deficiencies. Whether the Kee proposal gets a hearing probably will depend upon whether Congress adjourns or recesses.

Monongahela National Forest Are Now Open to the Public

PARSONS, W. Va., June 18—Swimming at all Monongahela National Forest recreation areas is now open to the public for the season, Arthur A. Wood, supervisor of the forest announced today. Those areas include Horseshoe Recreational area, near Parsons, and Stuart Recreational area, near Elkins, and the Smoke Hole Recreational area near Petersburg.

Most of the areas have been used by the public for picnicking, and in some instances for camping, since early May, but the necessity for detailing life guards at the beaches during the swimming season, Supervisor Wood explained, limits the use of warmer facilities to the warmer summer period. The attention of the public is called to the fact that these areas are closed to the public after 11 p. m. Automobiles should be off of the area so that the gates may be locked by 1:15 p. m.

Later in the season when the outdoor recreation is in full swing, a new area will be opened at Bear Heaven on the Stuart Memorial Drive, located about midway between the Bickle Knob and Alpena Gap picnicking areas. It is reached from Route 5, turning off to the north at the entrance to Stuart recreation area, because of the regulation of traffic to one-way travel on Stuart Memorial Drive.

Want Lloyd George To Help Churchill

LONDON, June 19 (Wednesday) (AP)—Parliamentary circles said early today there was increasing demand among members of Parliament that David Lloyd George, World War prime minister, be included in the war cabinet as a move to strengthen the government.

The white-maned little Welshman declined to enter the Churchill cabinet when it was being formed a month ago. He is being pressed again, political circles said, to place his experience at the disposal of the government.

In the event Lloyd George entered the government it was believed he would be given a light job which would not be too much of a drain on the 77-year old leader who guided Britain through the decisive years of the World War.

But the fact that he would be at hand to give Churchill the benefit of his vast experience and judgment was considered as a strengthening prop for the government.

Bedford Man Loses Life In Peculiar Accident

Bedford, Pa., June 18—John Gordon, 44, of Bedford R. D. lost his life at 9 o'clock yesterday morning in an unusual accident on the highway near Claysburg. He was struck by a car operated by Lester Smith of Osterburg.

Gordon was engaged in taking a load of cattle to market. Near Claysburg one of the cows on the truck is reported to have leaped out of the truck bed. Gordon and a helper captured the animal and with a rope around the cow's neck, Gordon was reported to have propped his foot against the side of the parked truck and was pulling on the rope in an effort to get the cow back on the highway.

As Gordon gave a jerk on the rope, the noose slipped over the cow's head and Gordon plunged to the highway directly into the path of the automobile driven by Smith. The latter brought his car to a stop and assisted in removing Gordon to a Claysburg drug store where he was pronounced dead. His skull had been crushed.

John Gordon formerly resided in Imler, but removed to Bedford R. D. a few months ago. He is survived by his widow and several children.

DON'T TURN YOUR BACK ON BEAUTY

By HELEN FOLLETT

● DURING THE whole year through, the feminine back is on display, revealed in the winter time by the wearing of the formal evening gown, exposed to the public eye on the bathing beach in the good old summer season. Bare arms and throats get attention from their owners. But of their own backs, ladies know nothing at all. And backs have their beauty griefs, let me tell you.

Blackheads often appear on the upper portion. They can be routed out by applying alcohol after a brisk scrubbing with soap suds and a heavy brush. If something isn't done, these horrid wax-like blockades will break the walls of the pores, germs and germesses will crawl in, pustules will result.

If the shoulder bones show up, as happens on the skinnies, arm swinging exercises will strengthen and fill out the muscles. These same exercises will slenderize plump backs, because they are normalizing.

Watch Your Posture

Posture is important. Perhaps you've heard us harp on that same old string before. Posture is just another name for chic and the girl who is ambitious to gain a reputation for good dressing had better keep that fact in mind. We have more respect for the woman who carries herself beautifully than for the one who trots about in a slouchy manner. She's full of spunk and spirit, faces her responsibilities.

When you wear a long sleeved gown, dress your wrists prettily, dear lady. Sleeves that haven't a neat fit at the wrist make the neatest hands look ugly. Have them long enough to cover that little bony bump that is more useful than ornamental.

Cunning collar and cuff sets are adorable. Made of fine fabrics they impart daintiness of appearance. Have them scrupulously clean and without a ripple. Soiled finery is strictly taboo these days of fastidious dressing. Surprising how many nice girls "make things do."

Margaret Sullavan . . . she doesn't forget to keep her back lovely.

Hitler and

would be kept secret until their acceptance or rejection by France.

It was a meeting tha may change the face of the world as all men have known it—for Hitler and Mussolini had pledged themselves to build "a new Europe."

It appeared that the dictate of this new Munich—where less than two years ago the life of Czechoslovakia as a republic was ended—would be announced simultaneously from Berlin and Rome.

France Second Rate Power

This much seemed sure: that whatever the terms they would, if accepted, make the French army impotent and shove France into the place of a second-rate power.

Italy seemed destined to insist on her old demands for "Corsica, Tunisia, Nice," and other concessions to benefit her African colonies.

Most observers felt Germany would snatch back Alsace and Lorraine provinces lost at Versailles. The real question mark appeared beyond these seemingly obvious requirements.

It had been for Munich's citizens such a day of celebration and hero worship as they had not seen since September, 1938, when Hitler and Mussolini looked across the same table at Edouard Daladier and Neville Chamberlain.

The Munich "peace of appeasement" came out of that historic session. But since that day war has raged on a European front probably broader than any in history.

There was no thought of appeasement at the axis leaders met here this time, their faces plainly showing the strains of the struggle in which they have been engaged. Hitler had come direct from the general headquarters of his plunging army in the west.

People Cheer Hitler

While Premier Mussolini entered the city wearing his accustomed expression of determination, Hitler smiled broadly as standing in his car, he took the salutes of the shouting people.

It was the hour of the greatest triumph of all his carreer as a Nazi—a career that seventeen years ago in this very city landed him in jail after an unsuccessful putsch. It was a jail in which he wrote part of his foreshadowing "Mein Kampf."

It was here, too, that a beer cellar explosion left him alive last November—with a margin of a few minutes.

He entered this morning in a train guarded by four maneuvering planes. Schools were closed; streets echoed the heils of exulting thousands; men of the party, young and old, formed on the sidewalks.

Thousands of troops stood in solid rows upon the streets. Men and women marched singing about the city.

Mussolini arrived three hours later, at 3 p. m. (8 p. m., EST) with the manner of an old friend, Hitler met him at the railway station.

They reviewed an honor guard briefly and then, each in his own automobile, moved away in a parade, Hitler going on to the fuehrer-Haus—his palace of stone—and Mussolini to the Prinz Karl Palace to rest briefly.

Less than an hour later, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, the German dictator, called at the palace for the Italian head of the axis and they drove together to Hitler's house.

The crowd roared "heil! heil Duce!" Mussolini himself smiled this time.

Arriving at the bueherhaus, he was met at the gates by Hitler and then taken into the study where the two men fell to discussing what was to happen to the republic of France.

While the crowd before the silent stone house was kept back, so that no sound might go through to the conference room, German troops in the field still struck on and on at the heartsick French armies, and the high command announced:

"The military collapse of France is swiftly progressing under the pressure of our relentless pursuit."

Everywhere the isolated French forces were declared to be still falling back, and the Germans said more than 100,000 prisoners and immense war booty were taken yesterday alone.

Isaac Murphy, a Negro, Once Famous as Jockey

The last Negro jockey of any note was L. Barcene who fell during the 1929 season and never was much good thereafter. Most of the boys who might have gone on to become jockeys have stopped at being exercise boys. In fact, Marshall Lilley, who works for the Greentree Stable, is said to be the best exercise rider in the country. He is a Negro nearly fifty years old and has been given credit for bringing along Twenty Grand.

One of the great jockeys of all time was Isaac Murphy, a Negro. He and Earl Sande are the only jockeys who ever rode three Kentucky Derby winners, writes Shirley Povich in "The Washington Post." Murphy rode the first three winners in the American Derby and the fourth was ridden by another Negro. Twelve Kentucky Derbies were won by Negro riders.

The origin of the term "tenpenny nails" dates back to the fifteenth century when nails were sold in England by the hundred, the price being determined by the size of the nails. Those sold at ten pence a hundred were called tenpenny nails.

Four Nazi Raiders

claimed the dawn of the "battle of England."

He declared the navy and Royal airforce could smash any invading force in the channel and the 1,750,000 land defense forces, backed up by Canadian armies already on British soil, could finish off any invaders who did succeed in landing.

"If we stand up to him (Hitler) all Europe may be freed and the life of the world may move forward in broad, sunlit uplands," Churchill said.

"But if we fail the whole world, including the United States x x x will sink into the abyss of a new dark age made more sinster and perhaps more prolonged by the lights of a perverted science."

Asks France to Fight On

Although admitting the loss of the battle of France, Churchill urged the French to fight on, to sign no separate peace.

There still was no hint of the probable dispositon of the French fleet, which might possibly prove the winning factor of the war.

Whatever the terms agreed upon at the Hitler-Musolini conference, it seemed certain Germany would insist upon reduction of the French army to impotence and the relegation of France to the place of a second rate power.

Italy appeared certain to demand realization of her long-sought acquisition of Corsica, Tunis and Nice as well as other concessions to benefit her African colonies.

Fascist in Rome served notice that in any circumstances, the axis powers would lay down peace terms aimed at wiping British influence from the European continent for good and all.

French rejection of the offer from the axis powers, they said, would bring a quick "final assault" from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean.

With France in collapse and Britain fighting with material assistance from the United States, Virginio Gayda, often Mussolini's mouthpiece, declared the war had settled into "a purely anglo-saxon struggle against a large part of the rest of the world."

Despite the French resistance German motorized units plunged on southward. Heavy fighting raged around Orleans, scene of Joan of Arc's greatest military triumph, which the Germans said was captured; at La Charite Sur Loire and in the region around Dijon and Autun.

The French dynamited a four-mile long railroad tunnel in the Jura mountains near the Swiss frontier in an apparent effort to pin the eastern wing of their line to the mountains.

German forces failed in an attempt to slice through the reorganized French army in the southern Juras for a union with Italian forces in the southern Alps.

British bombers made new raids against western Germany and swapped blows with the Italians in Africa and the Mediterranean.

Frenchmen Bitter Toward Reynaud

Many Blame Him for Defeat of the French Armies

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

PARIS, June 18 (noon) (By Courier to Aachen and Telephone to Berlin) (AP)—The suit for peace of the apparently beaten French government has unleashed a torrent of resentment in German-occupied Paris against the regime which brought France to defeat.

Most of the feeling is turned against Former Premier Paul Reynaud, who resigned Sunday, and after him such leaders as Former Premier Edouard Daladier, who headed the government when France entered the war and directed its efforts during the first months.

Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, now premier, still commands respect as a venerable warriror who took on a crushing charge in a time of peril, but his advanced age, 84, and the presence in his cabinet of several holdovers of the previous ministry indicates to Parisians that the present government will be only temporary even if a peace with Germany does not bring changes.

New Firms Chartered

CHARLESTON, June 18 (AP)—The Marianna Smokeless Coal Company of Huntington, with an authorized capitalization of $500,000 and a starting capital of $1,000, received a charter from the secretary of state today. Incorporators of the firm, to operate in Wyoming county, are W. A. Ogg, W. G. Giddings and S. C. Onchell, all of Huntington.

A charter was granted the H. and M. Family Shoe Store of Beckley, capitalized at $5,000. Incorporators are W. E. Meachum and Christine Virginia Meachum of Charleston and G. D. Isley of Beckley.

Want Lloyd George To Help Churchill

LONDON, June 19 (Wednesday) (AP)—Parliamentary circles said early today there was increasing demand among members of Parliament that David Lloyd George, World War prime minister, be included in the war cabinet as a move to strengthen the government.

The white-maned little Welshman declined to enter the Churchill cabinet when it was being formed a month ago. He is being pressed again, political circles said, to place his experience at the disposal of the government.

In the event Lloyd George entered the government it was believed he would be given a light job which would not be too much of a drain on the 77-year old leader who guided Britain through the decisive years of the World War.

But the fact that he would be at hand to give Churchill the benefit of his vast experience and judgment was considered as a strengthening prop for the government.

Bedford Man Loses Life In Peculiar Accident

Bedford, Pa., June 18—John Gordon, 44, of Bedford R. D. lost his life at 9 o'clock yesterday morning in an unusual accident on the highway near Claysburg. He was struck by a car operated by Lester Smith of Osterburg.

Gordon was engaged in taking a load of cattle to market. Near Claysburg one of the cows on the truck is reported to have leaped out of the truck bed. Gordon and a helper captured the animal and with a rope around the cow's neck, Gordon was reported to have propped his foot against the side of the parked truck and was pulling on the rope in an effort to get the cow back on the highway.

As Gordon gave a jerk on the rope, the noose slipped over the cow's head and Gordon plunged to the highway directly into the path of the automobile driven by Smith. The latter brought his car to a stop and assisted in removing Gordon to a Claysburg drug store where he was pronounced dead. His skull had been crushed.

John Gordon formerly resided in Imler, but removed to Bedford R. D. a few months ago. He is survived by his widow and several children.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT

DON'T TURN YOUR BACK ON BEAUTY

By HELEN FOLLETT

● DURING THE whole year through, the feminine back is on display, revealed in the winter time by the wearing of the formal evening gown, exposed to the public eye on the bathing beach in the good old summer season. Bare arms and throats get attention from their owners. But of their own backs, ladies know nothing at all. And backs have their beauty griefs, let me tell you.

Blackheads often appear on the upper portion. They can be routed out by applying alcohol after a brisk scrubbing with soap suds and a heavy brush. If something isn't done, these horrid wax-like blockades will break the walls of the pores, germs and germesses will crawl in, pustules will result.

If the shoulder bones show up, as happens on the skinnies, arm swinging exercises will strengthen and fill out the muscles. These same exercises will slenderize plump backs, because they are normalizing.

Watch Your Posture

Posture is important. Perhaps you've heard us harp on that same old string before. Posture is just another name for chic and the girl who is ambitious to gain a reputation for good dressing had better keep that fact in mind. We have more respect for the woman who carries herself beautifully than for the one who trots about in a slouchy manner. She's full of spunk and spirit, faces her responsibilities.

When you wear a long sleeved gown, dress your wrists prettily, dear lady. Sleeves that haven't a neat fit at the wrist make the neatest hands look ugly. Have them long enough to cover that little bony bump that is more useful than ornamental.

Cunning collar and cuff sets are adorable. Made of fine fabrics they impart daintiness of appearance. Have them scrupulously clean and without a ripple. Soiled finery is strictly taboo these days of fastidious dressing. Surprising how many nice girls "make things do."

Margaret Sullavan . . . she doesn't forget to keep her back lovely.

would be kept secret until their acceptance or rejection by France.

It was a meeting tha may change the face of the world as all men have known it—for Hitler and Mussolini had pledged themselves to build "a new Europe."

It appeared that the dictate of this new Munich—where less than two years ago the life of Czechoslovakia as a republic was ended—would be announced simultaneously from Berlin and Rome.

France Second Rate Power

This much seemed sure: that whatever the terms they would, if accepted, make the French army impotent and shove France into the place of a second-rate power.

Italy seemed destined to insist on her old demands for "Corsica, Tunisia, Nice," and other concessions to benefit her African colonies.

Most observers felt Germany would snatch back Alsace and Lorraine provinces lost at Versailles. The real question mark appeared beyond these seemingly obvious requirements.

It had been for Munich's citizens such a day of celebration and hero worship as they had not seen since September, 1938, when Hitler and Mussolini looked across the same table at Edouard Daladier and Neville Chamberlain.

The Munich "peace of appeasement" came out of that historic session. But since that day war has raged on a European front probably broader than any in history.

There was no thought of appeasement at the axis leaders met here this time, their faces plainly showing the strains of the struggle in which they have been engaged. Hitler had come direct from the general headquarters of his plunging army in the west.

People Cheer Hitler

While Premier Mussolini entered the city wearing his accustomed expression of determination, Hitler smiled broadly as standing in his car, he took the salutes of the shouting people.

It was the hour of the greatest triumph of all his carreer as a Nazi—a career that seventeen years ago in this very city landed him in jail after an unsuccessful putsch. It was a jail in which he wrote part of his foreshadowing "Mein Kampf."

It was here, too, that a beer cellar explosion left him alive last November—with a margin of a few minutes.

He entered this morning in a train guarded by four maneuvering planes. Schools were closed; streets echoed the heils of exulting thousands; men of the party, young and old, formed on the sidewalks.

Thousands of troops stood in solid rows upon the streets. Men and women marched singing about the city.

Mussolini arrived three hours later, at 3 p. m. (8 p. m.), EST) with the manner of an old friend, Hitler met him at the railway station.

They reviewed an honor guard briefly and then, each in his own automobile, moved away in a parade, Hitler going on to the fuehrer-Haus—his palace of stone—and Mussolini to the Prinz Karl Palace to rest briefly.

Less than an hour later, Joachim, Von Ribbentrop, the German dictator, called at the palace for the Italian head of the axis and they drove together to Hitler's house.

The crowd roared "heil! heil Duce!" Mussolini himself smiled this time.

Arriving at the bueherhaus, he was met at the gates by Hitler and then taken into the study where the two men fell to discussing what was to happen to the republic of France.

While the crowd before the silent stone house was kept back, so that no sound might go through to the conference room, German troops in the field still struck on and on at the heartsick French armies, and the high command announced:

"The military collapse of France is swiftly progressing under the pressure of our relentless pursuit."

Everywhere the isolated French forces were declared to be still falling back, and the Germans said more than 100,000 prisoners and immense war booty were taken yesterday alone.

Isaac Murphy, a Negro, Once Famous as Jockey

The last Negro jockey of any note was L. Barcene who fell during the 1929 season and never was much good thereafter. Most of the boys who might have gone on to become jockeys have stopped at being exercise boys. In fact, Marshall Lilley, who works for the Greentree Stable, is said to be the best exercise rider in the country. He is a Negro nearly fifty years old and has been given credit for bringing along Twenty Grand.

One of the great jockeys of all time was Isaac Murphy, a Negro. He and Earl Sande are the only jockeys who ever rode three Kentucky Derby winners, writes Shirley Povich in "The Washington Post." Murphy rode the first three winners in the American Derby and the fourth was ridden by another Negro. Twelve Kentucky Derbies were won by Negro riders.

The origin of the term "tenpenny nails" dates back to the fifteenth century when nails were sold in England by the hundred, the price being determined by the size of the nails. Those sold at ten pence a hundred were called tenpenny nails.

Four Nazi Raiders

claimed the dawn of the "battle of England."

He declared the navy and Royal airforce could smash any invading force in the channel and the 1,750,000 land defense forces, backed up by Canadian armies already on British soil, could finish off any invaders who did succeed in landing.

"If we stand up to him (Hitler) all Europe may be freed and the life of the world may move forward in broad, sunlit uplands," Churchill said.

"But if we fail the whole world, including the United States x x x will sink into the abyss of a new dark age made more sinster and perhaps more prolonged by the lights of a perverted science."

Asks France to Fight On

Although admitting the loss of the battle of France, Churchill urged the French to fight on, to sign no separate peace.

There still was no hint of the probable dispositon of the French fleet, which might possibly prove the winning factor of the war.

Whatever the terms agreed upon at the Hitler-Musolini conference, it seemed certain Germany would insist upon reduction of the French army to impotence and the relegation of France to the place of a second rate power.

Italy appeared certain to demand realization of her long-sought acquisition of Corsica, Tunis and Nice as well as other concessions to benefit her African colonies.

Fascist in Rome served notice that in any circumstances, the axis powers would lay down peace terms aimed at wiping British influence from the European continent for good and all.

French rejection of the offer from the axis powers, they said, would bring a quick "final assault" from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean.

With France in collapse and Britain fighting with material assistance from the United States, Virginio Gayda, often Mussolini's mouthpiece, declared the war had settled into "a purely anglo-saxon struggle against a large part of the rest of the world."

Despite the French resistance German motorized units plunged on southward. Heavy fighting raged around Orleans, scene of Joan of Arc's greatest military triumph, which the Germans said was captured; at La Charite Sur Loire and in the region around Dijon and Autun.

The French dynamited a four-mile long railroad tunnel in the Jura mountains near the Swiss frontier in an apparent effort to pin the eastern wing of their line to the mountains.

German forces failed in an attempt to slice through the reorganized French army in the southern Juras for a union with Italian forces in the southern Alps.

British bombers made new raids against western Germany and swapped blows with the Italians in Africa and the Mediterranean.

Joe Medwick Suffers Concussion of Brain

Dodger Slugger Hit on Head by Pitched Ball

Bob Bowman's High, Hard One Knocks Out 'Ducky' in First Inning

Outfielder Is Expected To Be Lost to Team for Three Weeks

BROOKLYN, June 18 (AP)—Five days after joining the Brooklyn Dodgers in a deal that seemed likely to decide the National League pennant, outfielder Joe Medwick was struck on the head by a pitched ball today and suffered a concussion of the brain.

He was expected to be lost to the team for about three weeks.

The accident occurred in the first inning of a game between the Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals, Medwick's former teammates.

Bob Bowman, 25-year-old right-hander, threw the pitch that dropped the famous slugger. His first pitch to "Ducky" was a high, hard one that knocked Medwick unconscious.

Several Dodger players, suspicious that the ball was a "duster" thrown intentionally, rushed Bowman on the mound but were restrained by the umpires. Bowman was replaced by Ira Hutchinson when play resumed and Brooklyn scored three more runs in that inning.

Mrs. Medwick, sitting in a box nearby, screamed, but most of the crowd of more than 10,000 fans watched in tense silence as Medwick was caried from the field on a stretcher.

He was removed to a hospital. Two physicians said they found no evidence of a fracture and at the hospital Dr. Daniel McAteer said the concussion did not appear critical.

In the trade last Wednesday by which the Dodgers acquired him Brooklyn gave up an estimated $150,000 and four players for Medwick and Pitcher Curt Davis.

NEW DODGER IS INJURED

JOE MEDWICK

Struck on the head by a pitched ball delivered by Bob Bowman, of the Cardinals, in the first inning of yesterday's Brooklyn-St. Louis game, Joe Medwick, Dodgers' outfielder, suffered a concussion of the brain and was taken to a New York hospital. The slugging outfielder probably will be out of action for three weeks. Medwick, along with Curt Davis, pitcher, recently was traded by St. Louis to Brooklyn for four players and a cash sum rumored to exceed $100,000.

Indians' "Peace Pipe" Is Rancid With Oscar Vitt

Effort 'To Smoke Him Out' Hurts Cleveland Manager

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP) — The pain remains long after the branding iron has been removed, so the fact that his boys have withdrawn their bitter statements calling for the resignation of Oscar Vitt probably is slight balm to the maimed feelings of the little Cleveland pilot. The words were spoken, and subsequent words cannot erase the memory.

A man can shrug away outside criticism, but when it comes from his own family circle, from his boys, it reaches in and clamps a death grip on the soul. If the lads who worked with him and for him, who should know him if anyone could, gave him the cold shoulder, well. . .

There was something deeply pathetic, something which brought a lump unbidden to the throat, in his words as he heard that Bobby Feller and Hal Trosky were among those who had found him wanting.

"If those fellows are against me," he said, "well, I don't know . . ."

They were the words of a man receiving a death sentence, a man from whom all hope has fled. Hal Trosky, whom he considered his friend; Bob Feller, his pride and joy, the boy he watched over with fatherly solicitude, and of whom, in our hearing, he never uttered words other than praise.

The little guy with the bantam rooster strut and the wide, snapping watery-blue eyes undoubtedly has his faults, as has everyone. One of these is a babbling brook tendency. His fleeting thoughts immediately were transformed into words. Some stung, some would not have been said were there a sidetrack between his mind and his tongue.

His disgruntled players say his Mexican jumping bean performance on the Bench spreads the jitters for yards around. Maybe it does. That's Oscar Vitt, a nervous little jack-in-the-box who couldn't sit still long enough for a snapshot.

He is accused of insecirity in his dealings with his players. We wouldn't know about that. We never found him so. He always was frankness itself in his statements to us. Perhaps too frank for his own good at times.

The action of the players in protesting against him is without precedent in baseball. It occasionally happens in football. The Colorado football squad demanded the ousting of Bunny Oakes. Other such uprisings have been noted.

And such actions must be a hot rion to the man who is the target, must cause his to pause and wonder wherein he has failed.

We like old Uncle Oz. Like him and feel sorry for him. We can't help but think that whatever he did, there was no viciousness behind it. His bark is worse than his bite.

St. Louis Cards Sidetrack Brooklyn In Eleven - Inning Struggle, 7-5

Billy Southworth's Club Registers Seventh Straight Win

BROOKLYN, June 18 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers were sidetracked again today by the St. Louis Cardinals 7 to 5 in an eleven-inning struggle that was marred by the serious injury of Joe Medwick, who was struck on the head by a pitched ball.

It was the sixth straight triumph for the Cardinals, still unbeaten since Billy Southworth assumed the managership, and the third defeat in a row for the Dodgers.

Brooklyn was placed in jeopardy of being tied for second in the National League by the New York Giants.

Medwick was knocked out in the first inning by a ball pitched by Bob Bowman and removed to a hospital where his injury was diagnosed as a brain concussion—likely to keep him out of the line-up for about three weeks.

Medwick was the fourth batter to face Bowman. The first three hit safely for two runs and when Ire Hutchinson replaced Bowman after the accident, the Dodgers scored two more tallies on another hit and an error.

But the Cards charged right back in the second with three runs off Luke Hamlin on a single, a walk, Joe Orengo's triple and a long fly.

This was the way the game continued until Cookie Lavagetto hit a homer in the seventh to give Brooklyn what looked like a satisfactory margin. Then Hamlin relaxed and served up one of his well known home run balls to Enos (Country) Slaughter with a man on base in the Eighth and St. Louis went on to win.

Brooklyn loaded the bases in its half of the eleventh, but failed to score.

Smith Baffles Yanks To Give Sox 5-3 Win

New Yorkers Drop Third Straight; Keller Hits Eleventh Homer

CHICAGO, June 18 (AP)—Southpaw Ed Smith baffled the New York Yankees on six hits again today to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 5 to 3 victory over the World Champions.

The outcome ended a five-game losing streak for Chicago and extended the Yankees' skid to three in a row.

The White Sox peppered three New York hurlers with fourteen hits, scoring one run in each of the first four frames, as Athey Donald retired with his second defeat of the season. In the Chicago collection were home runs by Mike Kreevich and Julius Solters.

The Yanks also had two homers, Charley Keller's eleventh of the season in the first and Joe DiMaggio's tenth with one on in the ninth inning. Smith had defeated the Yanks on seven hits earlier this month in New York.

Schoew Is Winner Of Tennis Title

Huntington Player Cops Junior Honors in West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 18 (AP)—Charley Schoew, an 18-year-old player with a cool, steady game, won the state Junior tennis title today in a Huntington field day behind the nets.

Schoew dropped Johnny Jones, 18, his Huntington townsman, from the finals by a 6-1, 6-3, 6-4 count to follow Bill Dunham, of Parkersburg as the West Virginia titlist.

Jean Wetherall, 15, of Huntington, meanwhile defeated another Huntington girl for the Junior girls' championship and Richard Garrett, 14, of Morgantown, won the title in the younger boys' division of the state tournament.

Schoew and Garrett are eligible to compete in the Mid-Atlantic events to be held at Baltimore July 17-18.

Dunham, the 1939 Junior title holder, and Ruth Jones, of Parkersburg, last year's girl champion, were ineligible for the state tournament because of the age restrictions.

Players whose are exceeded 18 in January were barred from the junior events.

Schoew trounced John Hayman, the 1939 boys' champion, 6-3, 6-4 in the semi-finals. Jones, whose game in the championship set-to was somewhat erratic, won the position as Schoew's opponent by defeating Paul Lingo, of Charleston 6-4, 11-9.

In the girls' division Miss Weterall in the semi-finals trounced Rachael Nunley, of Huntington 6-1, 6-1 while Eleanor Ann Perry, of Huntington, won into the finals by defeating Patty Radford, of Huntington, 6-3, 6-2.

Garrett, showing much promise as a player, won the boys' title by a 6-4, 6-4 count from Dickie Williams, 14, of Huntington. He earlier defeated Jackie Samms, of Charleston, 6-2, 6-3.

Williams won into the finals with a 6-2, 6-0 triumph over John Stevenson, of Huntington.

ANOTHER AGE

More than a few have asked what would become of the Cleveland team or many other teams if they had been called upon to play in front of the lashing, sarcastic tongue of John McGraw.

But this is a different age, carrying different customs. McGraw, in the main, was dealing through the greater part of his career with ballplayers getting from $3,000 to a top of $10,000. John J. was the big money man of his tribe. He was the boss and everyone knew it.

Today many managers have to handle ball players who are getting substantial sums above the manager's pay check. This can make a healthy or an unhealthy difference. Today many ball-playing salaries run above $20,000 per man. The $20,000 athlete is thinner-skinned. He feels he doesn't have to take any panning.

Few can question the fact that ball players in the main, get what they are worth. But this doesn't alter the situation when it comes to enforcing the matter of discipline.

Miller Huggins was one of the rare exceptions. Huggins wasn't getting anything like the salary Babe Ruth drew when the Babe was baseball's biggest card. But the little Yankee manager didn't hesitate to plaster Ruth with baseball's biggest fine and baseball's heaviest suspension.

Answer — Huggins had the support of the front office. The manager who hasn't this support today is up against a losing snarl.

THE ELEVENTH DEFENSE

In Joe Louis' eleventh defense of his title I still believe the main answer concerns his mood for the occasion.

Louis is at his best only when keyed up inwardly. This is the main reason why he figures to turn on all the steam his system carries.

In the Tommy Farr fight he was afraid of being butted or else cracking his hands on the tough Englishman. He had the same feeling in the first Godoy afair.

Louis has always been much more worried about the butting side than he is about a hard punch. And it takes no vast imagination to understand that even a heavyweight champion needs two good hands. Any puncher who can apply the big sock as powerfully as The Bomber does must always face the risk of a broken or wounded paw.

Louis takes few chances when his opponent stands up and gives him an open shot at the chin. But fighters of the Farr-Godoy type are much more dangerous in the way of human punching bags.

Godoy is much harder to hurt and much harder to hit with a solid rap than any heavyweight now around. Baer and Galento were easy targets. They could be measured and tagged. The best armament Godoy carries is a tough jaw and a tougher skull. He isn't likely to take a sprawl from any one or two punches.

THE WAY IT LOOKS

No one can question the fact that Joe Louis can outpunch and outbox Godoy from here to the Southern Cross. He is just as game. He can take just as much punishment. Louis has almost every angle on Godoy on the physical side.

But Louis has never liked the fighting game. He has made more money than he can ever spend, unless he starts throwing it out of a window in large chunks.

Godoy, who really doesn't belong in the same ring with Louis, still has certain advantages. He is just as tough and he has everything to win—and nothing to lose. He can outsmart Louis, which is a fairly dubious compliment. For Godoy has nothing like the ring brains that Jim Corbett, Jack Johnson and Gene Tunney had. A fellow like Harry Greb would leave Godoy looking a sorry sight. It would be sheer murder.

My angle is that after being booed and panned, Louis will forget the cut that might come from a head butt or the crack that might come from a hand, and get savage again. Louis is that sort of a fighter.

In 40 rounds against Pastor, Farr and Godoy he did no damage. Could you imagine these three men against Jack Dempsey in Jack's prime? Or Harry Greb? Gene Tunney? Or Jack Johnson? Yet Louis, using either or both hands, can outpunch any of these I have named.

He is just as much of a killer, when he happens to feel in the mood. He has everything, except the ability to adjust himself mentally, or emotionally, or psychologically to the situation, when it happens to be something different. Joe is no mental acrobat. He is a tough hombre when he steps out with the feeling of murder in his heart. But he is no subtle adjuster to the unexpected.

If he isn't sore at Godoy on this occasion, it is only proof that he has lost some part of the old keenness he once had. For he has every reason to stop Godoy quickly as he can, to offset the result of their first meeting, when the heavyweight champion of the world left the ring more than a trifle discredited as one of the great champions of all time.

My angle is that in this next meeting I would not like to be Arturo Godoy.

Bob Bowman's High, Hard One Knocks Out 'Ducky' in First Inning

Outfielder Is Expected To Be Lost to Team for Three Weeks

BROOKLYN, June 18 (AP)—Five days after joining the Brooklyn Dodgers in a deal that seemed likely to decide the National League pennant, outfielder Joe Medwick was struck on the head by a pitched ball today and suffered a concussion of the brain.

He was expected to be lost to the team for about three weeks.

The accident occurred in the first inning of a game between the Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals, Medwick's former teammates.

Bob Bowman, 25-year-old right-hander, threw the pitch that dropped the famous slugger. His first pitch to "Ducky" was a high, hard one that knocked Medwick unconscious.

Several Dodger players, suspicious that the ball was a "duster" thrown intentionally, rushed Bowman on the mound but were restrained by the umpires. Bowman was replaced by Ira Hutchinson when play resumed and Brooklyn scored three more runs in that inning.

Mrs. Medwick, sitting in a box nearby, screamed, but most of the crowd of more than 10,000 fans watched in tense silence as Medwick was caried from the field on a stretcher.

He was removed to a hospital. Two physicians said they found no evidence of a fracture and at the hospital Dr. Daniel McAteer said the concussion did not appear critical.

In the trade last Wednesday by which the Dodgers acquired him Brooklyn gave up an estimated $150,000 and four players for Medwick and Pitcher Curt Davis.

Indians' "Peace Pipe" Is Rancid With Oscar Vitt

Effort 'To Smoke Him Out' Hurts Cleveland Manager

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP) — The pain remains long after the branding iron has been removed, so the fact that his boys have withdrawn their bitter statements calling for the resignation of Oscar Vitt probably is slight balm to the maimed feelings of the little Cleveland pilot. The words were spoken, and subsequent words cannot erase the memory.

A man can shrug away outside criticism, but when it comes from his own family circle, from his boys, it reaches in and clamps a death grip on the soul. If the lads who worked with him and for him, who should know him if anyone could, gave him the cold shoulder, well. . .

There was something deeply pathetic, something which brought a lump unbidden to the throat, in his words as he heard that Bobby Feller and Hal Trosky were among those who had found him wanting.

"If those fellows are against me," he said, "well, I don't know . . ."

They were the words of a man receiving a death sentence, a man from whom all hope has fled. Hal Trosky, whom he considered his friend; Bob Feller, his pride and joy, the boy he watched over with fatherly solicitude, and of whom, in our hearing, he never uttered words other than praise.

The little guy with the bantam rooster strut and the wide, snapping watery-blue eyes undoubtedly has his faults, as has everyone. One of these is a babbling brook tendency. His fleeting thoughts immediately were transformed into words. Some stung, some would not have been said were there a sidetrack between his mind and his tongue.

His disgruntled players say his Mexican jumping bean performance on the Bench spreads the jitters for yards around. Maybe it does. That's Oscar Vitt, a nervous little jack-in-the-box who couldn't sit still long enough for a snapshot.

He is accused of insecirity in his dealings with his players. We wouldn't know about that. We never found him so. He always was frankness itself in his statements to us. Perhaps too frank for his own good at times.

The action of the players in protesting against him is without precedent in baseball. It occasionally happens in football. The Colorado football squad demanded the ousting of Bunny Oakes. Other such uprisings have been noted.

And such actions must be a hot rion to the man who is the target, must cause his to pause and wonder wherein he has failed.

We like old Uncle Oz. Like him and feel sorry for him. We can't help but think that whatever he did, there was no viciousness behind it. His bark is worse than his bite.

NEW DODGER IS INJURED

JOE MEDWICK

Struck on the head by a pitched ball delivered by Bob Bowman, of the Cardinals, in the first inning of yesterday's Brooklyn-St. Louis game, Joe Medwick, Dodgers' outfielder, suffered a concussion of the brain and was taken to a New York hospital. The slugging outfielder probably will be out of action for three weeks. Medwick, along with Curt Davis, pitcher, recently was traded by St. Louis to Brooklyn for four players and a cash sum rumored to exceed $100,000.

St. Louis Cards Sidetrack Brooklyn In Eleven - Inning Struggle, 7-5

Billy Southworth's Club Registers Seventh Straight Win

BROOKLYN, June 18 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers were sidetracked again today by the St. Louis Cardinals 7 to 5 in an eleven-inning struggle that was marred by the serious injury of Joe Medwick, who was struck on the head by a pitched ball.

It was the sixth straight triumph for the Cardinals, still unbeaten since Billy Southworth assumed the managership, and the third defeat in a row for the Dodgers.

Brooklyn was placed in jeopardy of being tied for second in the National League by the New York Giants.

Medwick was knocked out in the first inning by a ball pitched by Bob Bowman and removed to a hospital where his injury was diagnosed as a brain concussion—likely to keep him out of the line-up for about three weeks.

Medwick was the fourth batter to face Bowman. The first three hit safely for two runs and when Ire Hutchinson replaced Bowman after the accident, the Dodgers scored two more tallies on another hit and an error.

But the Cards charged right back in the second with three runs off Luke Hamlin on a single, a walk, Joe Orengo's triple and a long fly.

This was the way the game continued until Cookie Lavagetto hit a homer in the seventh to give Brooklyn what looked like a satisfactory margin. Then Hamlin relaxed and served up one of his well known home run balls to Enos (Country) Slaughter with a man on base in the Eighth and St. Louis went on to win.

Brooklyn loaded the bases in its half of the eleventh, but failed to score.

Schoew Is Winner Of Tennis Title

Huntington Player Cops Junior Honors in West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 18 (AP)—Charley Schoew, an 18-year-old player with a cool, steady game, won the state Junior tennis title today in a Huntington field day behind the nets.

Schoew dropped Johnny Jones, 18, his Huntington townsman, from the finals by a 6-1, 6-3, 6-4 count to follow Bill Dunham, of Parkersburg as the West Virginia titlist.

Jean Wetherall, 15, of Huntington, meanwhile defeated another Huntington girl for the Junior girls' championship and Richard Garrett, 14, of Morgantown, won the title in the younger boys' division of the state tournament.

Schoew and Garrett are eligible to compete in the Mid-Atlantic events to be held at Baltimore July 17-18.

Dunham, the 1939 Junior title holder, and Ruth Jones, of Parkersburg, last year's girl champion, were ineligible for the state tournament because of the age restrictions.

Players whose are exceeded 18 in January were barred from the junior events.

Schoew trounced John Hayman, the 1939 boys' champion, 6-3, 6-4 in the semi-finals. Jones, whose game in the championship set-to was somewhat erratic, won the position as Schoew's opponent by defeating Paul Lingo, of Charleston 6-4, 11-9.

In the girls' division Miss Weterall in the semi-finals trounced Rachael Nunley, of Huntington 6-1, 6-1 while Eleanor Ann Perry, of Huntington, won into the finals by defeating Patty Radford, of Huntington, 6-3, 6-2.

Garrett, showing much promise as a player, won the boys' title by a 6-4, 6-4 count from Dickie Williams, 14, of Huntington. He earlier defeated Jackie Samms, of Charleston, 6-2, 6-3.

Williams won into the finals with a 6-2, 6-0 triumph over John Stevenson, of Huntington.

ANOTHER AGE

More than a few have asked what would become of the Cleveland team or many other teams if they had been called upon to play in front of the lashing, sarcastic tongue of John McGraw.

But this is a different age, carrying different customs. McGraw, in the main, was dealing through the greater part of his career with ballplayers getting from $3,000 to a top of $10,000. John J. was the big money man of his tribe. He was the boss and everyone knew it.

Today many managers have to handle ball players who are getting substantial sums above the manager's pay check. This can make a healthy or an unhealthy difference. Today many ball-playing salaries run above $20,000 per man. The $20,000 athlete is thinner-skinned. He feels he doesn't have to take any panning.

Few can question the fact that ball players in the main, get what they are worth. But this doesn't alter the situation when it comes to enforcing the matter of discipline.

Miller Huggins was one of the rare exceptions. Huggins wasn't getting anything like the salary Babe Ruth drew when the Babe was baseball's biggest card. But the little Yankee manager didn't hesitate to plaster Ruth with baseball's biggest fine and baseball's heaviest suspension.

Answer — Huggins had the support of the front office. The manager who hasn't this support today is up against a losing snarl.

THE ELEVENTH DEFENSE

In Joe Louis' eleventh defense of his title I still believe the main answer concerns his mood for the occasion.

Louis is at his best only when keyed up inwardly. This is the main reason why he figures to turn on all the steam his system carries.

In the Tommy Farr fight he was afraid of being butted or else cracking his hands on the tough Englishman. He had the same feeling in the first Godoy afair.

Louis has always been much more worried about the butting side than he is about a hard punch. And it takes no vast imagination to understand that even a heavyweight champion needs two good hands. Any puncher who can apply the big sock as powerfully as The Bomber does must always face the risk of a broken or wounded paw.

Louis takes few chances when his opponent stands up and gives him an open shot at the chin. But fighters of the Farr-Godoy type are much more dangerous in the way of human punching bags.

Godoy is much harder to hit and much harder to hit with a solid rap than any heavyweight now around. Baer and Galento were easy targets. They could be measured and tagged. The best armament Godoy carries is a tough jaw and a tougher skull. He isn't likely to take a sprawl from any one or two punches.

THE WAY IT LOOKS

No one can question the fact that Joe Louis can outpunch and outbox Godoy from here to the Southern Cross. He is just as game. He can take just as much punishment. Louis has almost every angle on Godoy on the physical side.

But Louis has never liked the fighting game. He has made more money than he can ever spend, unless he starts throwing it out of a window in large chunks.

Godoy, who really doesn't belong in the same ring with Louis, still has certain advantages. He is just as tough and he has everything to win—and nothing to lose. He can outsmart Louis, which is a fairly dubious compliment. For Godoy has nothing like the ring brains that Jim Corbett, Jack Johnson and Gene Tunney had. A fellow like Harry Greb would leave Goday looking a sorry sight. It would be sheer murder.

My angle is that after being booed and panned, Louis will forget the cut that might come from a head butt or the crack that might come from a hand, and get savage again. Louis is that sort of a fighter.

In 40 rounds against Pastor, Farr and Godoy he did no damage. Could you imagine these three men against Jack Dempsey in Jack's prime? Or Harry Greb? Gene Tunney? Or Jack Johnson? Yet Louis, using either or both hands, can outpunch any of these I have named.

He is just as much of a killer, when he happens to feel in the mood. He has everything, except the ability to adjust himself mentally, or emotionally, or psychologically, to the situation, when it happens to be something different. Joe is no mental acrobat. He is a tough hombre when he steps out with the feeling of murder in his heart. But he is no subtle adjuster to the unexpected.

If he isn't sore at Godoy on this occasion, it is only proof that he has lost some part of the old keenness he once had. For he has every reason to stop Godoy quickly as he can, to offset the result of their first meeting, when the heavyweight champion of the world left the ring more than a trifle discredited as one of the great champions of all time.

My angle is that in this next meeting I would not like to be Arturo Godoy.

Often Heads Attack in 15-9 Win; Ellerslie Loses to Wilkinson's

Corriganville walloped Narrows Park to the tune of 15 to 9 and Wilkinson's Grocers took Ellerslie into camp 4 to 2 yesterday in Allegany County Softball League contests played at Narrows Park and Ellerslie.

Lloyd Klein also belted a triple for the Cords, and Logsdon, of Narrows Park, contributed a sensation catch and banged out two hits.

Wilkinson's Grocers committed ten errors by the airtight pitching of Scaletta in the pinches and kept the opposition from scoring more than two runs. Hixenbaugh, of the Grocers, and R. Smith, of Ellerslie, had two hits each.

Corriganville and Potomac Valley will play off a postponed game tomorrow at 6 p. m., in Corriganville.

Washington Wins Regatta at Poughkeepsie

Huskies Conquer Cornell Crew by Half a Length

Syracuse Is Third, Navy, Fourth in Four-Mile Varsity Test

Time of Winners Is Slowest in 43 Races--Husky Jayvees Score

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 18 (AP)—Washington's Huskies, rowing through semi-darkness over the Hudson river waters, today won the four-mile varsity race of the 43rd Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta.

The Huskies, in front nearly all the way, finished a half length in front of Cornell with Syracuse third.

Navy Is Fourth

Navy finished fourth with California, which set the course record a year ago, fifth; Columbia, sixth; Wisconsin, seventh, and Princeton, eighth. It was so dark that it was impossible to distinguish the exact distances separating the trailing crews.

The Huskies trailed Syracuse the first mile and were in third place as the Orange showed the way past the mile and a half mark with Cornell in second place.

Coming to the two-mile mark, Washington stepped up the tempo and pulled away with Cornell battling every stroke. The Ithacans forged to the front by half deck half a mile from the finish but were unable to stave off the Huskies' closing bid. From the river band it appeared as if a half length separated the pair but some closer to the finish called it only a few feet.

Washington was clocked in twenty-two minutes forty-two seconds far behind the record set by California last year.

Cornell was timed in 22:45.3. Syracuse in twenty-two minutes fifty-seven seconds. Navy 23:02. California 23:17.1. Columbia 24:02. Wisconsin 24:06. Princeton 24:09.

This not only was the second slowest varsity race, but probably the slowest entire regatta of all the forty-three in the I. R. A. books. It started at 3 o'clock with a dreary two-mile freshman race, continued at four with a misguided attempt to start the junior varsities, three of which promptly swamped in the first half mile, and continued on through postponements until the eight varsity shells finished their battle in fast-growing darkness.

For the last mile of the four, Washington and Cornell had the varsity race all to themselves. The Ithacans, striving for their first victory since 1930, seemed to have pushed their bow inches in front a half mile from home. But the Huskies, paced by sophomore Ted Garhart, came on again to bring Washington down in front for the third time in five years.

Huskies Jayvees Win

To complete the picture of a daffy day on the water, the Jayvees reran their race in almost total darkness, long after all the spectators had gone home. Finishing at a line marked by the coast guard boats' floodlights, Washington, first to swamp on the original attempt, won the three-mile test by a length over Navy, followed in order by California, Syracuse, Columbia and Cornell.

Sarazen Praises Nelson

WINNING CREW IN ANNUAL CLASSIC ON THE HUDSON RIVER

Rowing through semi-darkness over the Hudson river waters, Washington's Huskies yesterday won the four-mile varsity race of the forty-third Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta. The westerners finished half a length in front of Cornell with Syracuse third. Washington was clocked in twenty-two minutes, forty-two seconds, far behind the record set last year by California.

Trio Deadlocked In West Virginia Open Tournament

Weichman, Browning and Swing Post 144s at End of First Round

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 18 (AP)—Three pros, Larry Weichman, of Logan, and Bill Swing and Arnold Browning, of the Guyan country club, Huntington, were deadlocked tonight with 144's at the end of the first round of the 72-medal play for the West Virginia Open golf championship.

Two strokes off the pace came lithe Johnny Javins, of the Southmoor country club, Charleston. He shot a 69-77, taking the first round lead with the 69 but slowing up in the afternoon.

Weichman, a brother of the defending champion, had a morning round of 37-37—74; swing posted a 37-36—73 and Browning carded a 37-35—72. In the afternoon round Weichman got a 34-36—70; Swing had a 35-36—71 and Browning raced in with a 35-37—72.

Steve Jupinks, the young apprentice machinist representing the Moundsville country club, led the field of 42 amateurs with a 150. He shot spectacular golf, which attracted the gallery, in the morning round, getting a 36-38—74, and completed the trip in 38-38—76.

Clem Weichman, also of Logan, posted a 75-76—151 and admittedly was out of the running.

The first pair for the closing round tomorrow tees off at 9 a. m.

Perry T. Taylor, of Huntington, who twice has qualified for the U. S. Amateur, came up with two rounds of 76-75—151, and came right on the heels of Jupinko.

Ward Wilkinson, also of Huntington, tied with Roy Blizzard, of Charleston, former Kanawha county champion, with 154's.

Wilkinson covered the course in 78-76 while Blizzard scored a 76-78.

Bouncing Medicine Ball off His Chin Developed Godoy's 'Shock Absorber'

Chilean Tried This "Cure" To Strengthen His Neck for Louis Fight

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—If there's anything to the old fistic fad that your best belters must be toughest in neck, legs and wrists, then Arturo Godoy stands a somewhat better chance against Joe Louis in Yankee stadium Thursday night than a raw steak in a dog pound.

His neck particularly—a 17½ collar just about makes the circuit—has been pointed out by old timers as a lot sturdier article than the one which adorns the Brown Bomber. And old Harry Wills, who has one of those tree-trunks between head and shoulders, himself, comes up with the explanation as to how it gets that way.

It seems you spend a half hour or so daily, week after week, having a medicine ball bounced off your chin. "You does it gently first, then harder and harder," Harry says. "Pretty soon, you got a shock absorber there for punches to the chin."

Godoy tried this "cure" back in Chile, and, while he can't say he liked it, that particular exercise so strengthened his neck veteran boxing men believe it was the reason the Bomber couldn't budge him with his dynamite in their first meeting last February. Nor, they add, will Joe be able to do his usual annihilating on the Chilean chin this time.

Despite what may be billed as an edge for Arturo in neck and legs—he has done 450 miles of roadwork at his training camp—the betting boys still liked Louis tonight to take care of things Thursday. He was held at 1 to 5 in the bookie parlors.

Both belters wound up training today.

Mont Is Batting Star As West Side Wins

Paced by Tommy Mont, whose perfect day at bat included a homer, two-bagger and two singles, West Side took the measure of Potomac News yesterday in a City Softball League contest in Ridgeley by the score of 12 to 3.

Herb Dawson, West Side twirler, limited the opposition to two measly singles contributed by O'Neill and Angellatta and obtained three of his team's fourteen safeties.

In league games today Potomac News will meet the Bowman Grocers at Community Park, Ridgeley will tangle with the Police Boys' Club in Ridgeley and West Side and North End will do battle on the latter's field.

The score by innings:

Police Forfeit Game To BPO Elks

The Cumberland B. P. O. Elks won by the forfeit route yesterday when the City Police Department team failed to show up for its scheduled Rocking Chair Softball League contest at Community Park.

When only three members of the Police team put in their appearance the game was forfeited to the Elks, who now lead the league with four victories and one defeat.

The K. of C.—Junior Association of Commerce contest, scheduled yesterday, will be played today at 5:30 p. m., at Fort Hill field.

Tomorrow the Police will do battle with the Knights of Columbus at Fort Hill field.

Akron and Baltimore Teams To Play Here

The Akron and Baltimore softball teams of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company will clash Sunday at 1:45 p. m., at Constitution Park, it was announced yesterday.

William E. Shelton, of Baltimore, has obtained permission of Mayor Harry Irvine to stage the contest at the park.

A large crowd of Baltimore and Ohio employes of Akron and the traffic department of the company in Baltimore are expected to accompany both teams to this city to witness the game. The local Baltimore and Ohio offices also will be well represented.

Foxx's Slugging Belies Rumor of Sinus Trouble

There have been reports going around the American League for the last couple of years that Jimmy Foxx is beginning to slip. The sinus trouble, which has bothered him in past seasons, was said to be giving him trouble at the plate. Many said that it was almost impossible for Foxx to see the ball as it was hurled from the pitcher until it was almost upon him. There were some who feared for his safety at the plate.

Apparently the trouble has not been causing Jimmy any difficulty this season. The way he started hitting the ball indicated that he had little trouble following the sphere from the time it left the pitcher's hand until it reached the plate.

Nabs Jackal with Hands

A. T. Spies, known in boxing circles of Harrismith, South Africa, as "Cave Man" Spies, captured a jackal with his own hands in a terrific fight.

During a hunt a jackal sought refuge in an ant-bear hole. Spies took off his clothes and, armed only with a pocket knife and a rawhide noose, went into the hole. When the boxer emerged his face and hands were badly lacerated.

Tailor Taub Screams Loud —To Hush Louis' Clothes?

NEW YORK, June 18—It was an ugly shock to Professor Will Taub, the gents' outfielder who builds raiment for athletes of all kinds from the jockeys to the wrasslers and the stylish stouts, to learn of the treachery of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Louis.

Reading a piece about Louis in one of those magazines which provide reading matter for school kids and pictures for adults who have forgotten how to read, Professor Taub was thunderstuck by the news that Mrs Louis is dressing her husband out of Esquire.

"To think that Joe would go in for loud clothes after all the education he got from me!" groaned the professor, whose subdued greens and blues and canaries are famous up and down Broadway.

The Barber Pole Influence

The fact is, a conservative tailor—and Prof. Taub has always insisted on the softer shades of Red in his shirtings and the more mellifluous purples in his suitings—has got to draw the line somewhere. Most of them draw the line at Esquire, on the theory that the haberdashery editor of that sterling publication must have been scared by a barber-pole as a kiddie.

I've never seen a man dressed according to Esquire specifications. From what Professor Taub and other sober merchants tell me. It must hit you like a punch in the nose. From the tips of his lemon-colored brogans to the crown of his sky-blue dicer (with the rolled brim), by way of his peach-bloom plantaloons, his heliotrope shirt with the ochre crossbars, his mayonnaise jacket, his goat-s-blood tie, and his chinchilla nose-guard, the Esquire man should be something to see. I guess you can get the same effect by crossing an orchid with a ripe watermelon.

Beautiful though the theory is, conservative gents' outfitters like Professor Will Taub are firmly against it. Thus, you can imagine the heartache of the honest professor, the first man to instruct Joe Louis in the cult of nifty dressing, when he heard that the champ had gone Esquire.

And all through the machinations of a woman! Still, a man's wife is his weakest link, and I guess that that is where Esquire aims its guns. Devilish clever psychology, too.

JOE STUDIED, TOO

Up to the time that Esquire became the logical successor of St. Nicholas, Joe Louis was a faithful pupil of Prof. Taub. I will remember the day when Joe, louging around the professor's laboratory and watching the old alchemist weare a peagreen mohair shooting-jacket (as worn by the Earl of Albemarle and Maxie Rosenbloom) on his loom, began to think of setting the course of his career in the Prof.'s footsteps.

It was then that Professor Taub, the kindly maestro, presented Joe with a rare copy of that scholarly monograph, "Snedecker on How to Match Your Socks and Ties" (50 cents in cloth, $1 in the Morocco binding.)

"Go home and study this volume, Joseph," said Prof. Taub, "and some day you too may be able to tailor the waistcoats of Leo Durocher."

So Joe went home, and the last I heard, he was studying faithfully.

Just when it was the serpent crept into this idyll of the gents' outfitting racket, I do not know. Leafing through Esquire in an idle moment, Joe's wife may have been struck—and there's a nice magazine for you, striking a woman!—by one of those harmonious Esquire Get-ups, consisting of patent leather shoes, mink spats, orange bathing trunks, lavendar Ascot tie, and coonskin cap with pink feather. At any rate, she probably said to Joe: "Don't you think it's time you spruced up a bit, honey?"

That is hardly the thing to say to a man whose form is sheathed in Taub's chocolate gaberdine, with furnishings to match, but women are a little bit daffy, as a general thing. Anyway, I have it on the oath of the writer of this story about Mr. and Mrs. Joe Louis that Joe's wife is picking his clothes for him, and picking them right out of Esquire's early form, with scratches.

Furthermore—and this is what cuts Professor Taub to the quick—Louis does not deny it. He just shuffles along unhappily, looking like a bleeding bird of paradise.

Prof. Taub is hurt, but still an optimist; he hopes that Joe will not come out for his fight with Arturo Godoy this week wearing Esquire boxing trunks. Those would probably be in some shade of magenta, with pocket attachment for carrying caramels.

Gigantic Buffalo Hunt Is Staged in Australia

Expert rifle shots are out in force in the northern territory of Australia carrying on a gigantic buffalo hunt. Nearly 5,000 magnificent beasts—monarchs of the black-soil plains—are destined to die from bullets in the next few months.

Natives will strip thick hides from enormous carcasses, which will be left for hawks and dingoes to feed upon. The hunters, whose lives depend on horsemanship and courage, have Darwin as their headquarters.

Riggs Extended Five Sets To Beat Reedy

America's No. 1 Star Fails To Impress in Clay Courts Tourney

CHICAGO, June 18 (AP)—Bobby Riggs, ruler of American tennis since Don Budge turned pro, looked like anything but the national champion today in the second round of the National Clay courts tournament.

The little Chicago star bungled his way through a five-set battle with William Reedy of Los Angeles, before finally winning by 3-6, 7-9, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2. Reedy played steady tennis and took advantage of Riggs's errors in the first two sets.

All the seeded Americans who played today survived, but two of the three English entrants fell by the wayside.

Charles Hare, former Davis Cup mainstay, was eliminated by young Jimmy Everet, of Chicago, 3-6, 6-2, 6-1, 9-7. In the women's division, Nina Brown was eliminated by another home town product, Catherine Malcolm, 6-3, 6-4.

Most of the other ranked players advanced easily. Frank Parker, of Pasadena, seeded next to Riggs, breezed through Charles Mattman, Los Angeles, 6-2, 6-2, 6-0, and third seeded Don McNeill, of Kenyon college eliminated Billy Talbert, of Cincinnati, 6-1, 6-2, 7-5.

Top-seeded Alice Marble contented herself with winning an easy women's double match, but two other seeded players won without trouble. Virginia Wolfenden, seeded third, of Berkeley, Calif., eliminated Marceina Parker, of St. Louis, 6-4, 6-1, and Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, ranked next, defeated Helen Shockley, of Evanston, Ill., 6-1, 6-1.

Washington Wins Regatta at Poughkeepsie

Time of Winners Is Slowest in 43 Races--Husky Jayvees Score

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 18 (AP)—Washington's Huskies, rowing through semi-darkness over the Hudson river waters, today won the four-mile varsity race of the 43rd Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta.

The Huskies, in front nearly all the way, finished a half length in front of Cornell with Syracuse third.

Navy Is Fourth

Navy finished fourth with California, which set the course record a year ago, fifth; Columbia, sixth; Wisconsin, seventh, and Princeton, eighth. It was so dark that it was impossible to distinguish the exact distances separating the trailing crews.

The Huskies trailed Syracuse the first mile and were in third place as the Orange showed the way past the mile and a half mark with Cornell in second place.

Coming to the two-mile mark, Washington stepped up the tempo and pulled away with Cornell battling every stroke. The Ithacans forged to the front by half deck half a mile from the finish but were unable to stave off the Huskies' closing bid. From the river band it appeared as if a half length separated the pair but some closer to the finish called it only a few feet.

Washington was clocked in twenty-two minutes forty-two seconds far behind the record set by California last year.

Cornell was timed in 22:45.3. Syracuse in twenty-two minutes fifty-seven seconds. Navy 23:02. California 23:17.1. Columbia 24:02. Wisconsin 24:06. Princeton 24:09.

This not only was the second slowest varsity race, but probably the slowest entire regatta of all the forty-three in the I. R. A. books. It started at 3 o'clock with a dreary two-mile freshman race, continued at four with a misguided attempt to start the junior varsities, three of which promptly swamped in the first half mile, and continued on through postponements until the eight varsity shells finished their battle in fast-growing darkness.

For the last mile of the four, Washington and Cornell had the varsity race all to themselves. The Ithacans, striving for their first victory since 1930, seemed to have pushed their bow inches in front a half mile from home. But the Huskies, paced by sophomore Ted Garhart, came on again to bring Washington down in front for the third time in five years.

Huskies Jayvees Win

To complete the picture of a daffy day on the water, the Jayvees reran their race in almost total darkness, long after all the spectators had gone home. Finishing at a line marked by the coast guard boats' floodlights, Washington, first to swamp on the original attempt, won the three-mile test by a length over Navy, followed in order by California, Syracuse, Columbia and Cornell.

Sarazen Praises Nelson

WINNING CREW IN ANNUAL CLASSIC ON THE HUDSON RIVER

Rowing through semi-darkness over the Hudson river waters, Washington's Huskies yesterday won the four-mile varsity race of the forty-third Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta. The westerners finished half a length in front of Cornell with Syracuse third. Washington was clocked in twenty-two minutes, forty-two seconds, far behind the record set last year by California.

Trio Deadlocked In West Virginia Open Tournament

Weichman, Browning and Swing Post 144s at End of First Round

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 18 (AP)—Three pros, Larry Weichman, of Logan, and Bill Swing and Arnold Browning, of the Guyan country club, Huntington, were deadlocked tonight with 144's at the end of the first round of the 72-medal play for the West Virginia Open golf championship.

Two strokes off the pace came lithe Johnny Javins, of the Southmoor country club, Charleston. He shot a 69-77, taking the first round lead with the 69 but slowing up in the afternoon.

Weichman, a brother of the defending champion, had a morning round of 37-37—74; swing posted a 37-36—73 and Browning carded a 37-35—72. In the afternoon round Weichman got a 34-36—70; Swing had a 35-36—71 and Browning raced in with a 35-37—72.

Steve Jupinks, the young apprentice machinist representing the Moundsville country club, led the field of 42 amateurs with a 150. He shot spectacular golf, which attracted the gallery, in the morning round, getting a 36-38—74, and completed the trip in 38-38—76.

Clem Weichman, also of Logan, posted a 75-76—151 and admittedly was out of the running.

The first pair for the closing round tomorrow tees off at 9 a. m.

Perry T. Taylor, of Huntington, who twice has qualified for the U. S. Amateur, came up with two rounds of 76-75—151, and came right on the heels of Jupinko.

Ward Wilkinson, also of Huntington, tied with Roy Blizzard, of Charleston, former Kanawha county champion, with 154's.

Wilkinson covered the course in 78-76 while Blizzard scored a 76-78.

Bouncing Medicine Ball off His Chin Developed Godoy's 'Shock Absorber'

Chilean Tried This "Cure" To Strengthen His Neck for Louis Fight

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—If there's anything to the old fistic fad that your best belters must be toughest in neck, legs and wrists, then Arturo Godoy stands a somewhat better chance against Joe Louis in Yankee stadium Thursday night than a raw steak in a dog pound.

His neck particularly—a 17½ collar just about makes the circuit—has been pointed out by old timers as a lot sturdier article than the one which adorns the Brown Bomber. And old Harry Wills, who has one of those tree-trunks between head and shoulders, himself, comes up with the explanation as to how it gets that way.

It seems you spend a half hour or so daily, week after week, having a medicine ball bounced off your chin. "You does it gently first, then harder and harder," Harry says. "Pretty soon, you got a shock absorber there for punches to the chin."

Godoy tried this "cure" back in Chile, and, while he can't say he liked it, that particular exercise so strengthened his neck veteran boxing men believe it was the reason the Bomber couldn't budge him with his dynamite in their first meeting last February. Nor, they add, will Joe be able to do his usual annihilating on the Chilean chin this time.

Despite what may be billed as an edge for Arturo in neck and legs—he has done 450 miles of roadwork at his training camp—the betting boys still liked Louis tonight to take care of things Thursday. He was held at 1 to 5 in the bookie parlors.

Both belters wound up training today.

Mont Is Batting Star As West Side Wins

Paced by Tommy Mont, whose perfect day at bat included a homer, two-bagger and two singles, West Side took the measure of Potomac News yesterday in a City Softball League contest in Ridgeley by the score of 12 to 3.

Herb Dawson, West Side twirler, limited the opposition to two measly singles contributed by O'Neill and Angellatta and obtained three of his team's fourteen safeties.

Akron and Baltimore Teams To Play Here

The Akron and Baltimore softball teams of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company will clash Sunday at 1:45 p. m., at Constitution Park, it was announced yesterday.

William E. Shelton, of Baltimore, has obtained permission of Mayor Harry Irvine to stage the contest at the park.

A large crowd of Baltimore and Ohio employes of Akron and the traffic department of the company in Baltimore are expected to accompany both teams to this city to witness the game. The local Baltimore and Ohio offices also will be well represented.

Police Forfeit Game To BPO Elks

The Cumberland B. P. O. Elks won by the forfeit route yesterday when the City Police Department team failed to show up for its scheduled Rocking Chair Softball League contest at Community Park.

When only three members of the Police team put in their appearance the game was forfeited to the Elks, who now lead the league with four victories and one defeat.

The K. of C.—Junior Association of Commerce contest, scheduled yesterday, will be played today at 5:30 p. m., at Fort Hill field.

Tomorrow the Police will do battle with the Knights of Columbus at Fort Hill field.

Nabs Jackal with Hands

A. T. Spies, known in boxing circles of Harrismith, South Africa, as "Cave Man" Spies, captured a jackal with his own hands in a terrific fight.

During a hunt a jackal sought refuge in an ant-bear hole. Spies took off his clothes and, armed only with a pocket knife and a rawhide noose, went into the hole. When the boxer emerged his face and hands were badly lacerated.

Foxx's Slugging Belies Rumor of Sinus Trouble

There have been reports going around the American League for the last couple of years that Jimmy Foxx is beginning to slip. The sinus trouble, which has bothered him in past seasons, was said to be giving him trouble at the plate. Many said that it was almost impossible for Foxx to see the ball as it was hurled from the pitcher until it was almost upon him. There were some who feared for his safety at the plate.

Apparently the trouble has not been causing Jimmy any difficulty this season. The way he started hitting the ball indicated that he had little trouble following the sphere from the time it left the pitcher's hand until it reached the plate.

Tailor Taub Screams Loud —To Hush Louis' Clothes?

NEW YORK, June 18—It was an ugly shock to Professor Will Taub, the gents' outfielder who builds raiment for athletes of all kinds from the jockeys to the wrasslers and the stylish stouts, to learn of the treachery of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Louis.

Reading a piece about Louis in one of those magazines which provide reading matter for school kids and pictures for adults who have forgotten how to read, Professor Taub was thunderstuck by the news that Mrs Louis is dressing her husband out of Esquire.

"To think that Joe would go in for loud clothes after all the education he got from me!" groaned the professor, whose subdued greens and blues and canaries are famous up and down Broadway.

The Barber Pole Influence

The fact is, a conservative tailor—and Prof. Taub has always insisted on the softer shades of Red in his shirtings and the more mellifluous purples in his suitings—has got to draw the line somewhere. Most of them draw the line at Esquire, on the theory that the haberdashery editor of that sterling publication must have been scared by a barber-pole as a kiddie.

I've never seen a man dressed according to Esquire specifications. From what Professor Taub and other sober merchants tell me. It must hit you like a punch in the nose. From the tips of his lemon-colored brogans to the crown of his sky-blue dicer (with the rolled brim), by way of his peach-bloom plantaloons, his heliotrope shirt with the ochre crossbars, his mayonnaise jacket, his goat-s-blood tie, and his chinchilla nose-guard, the Esquire man should be something to see. I guess you can get the same effect by crossing an orchid with a ripe watermelon.

Beautiful though the theory is, conservative gents' outfitters like Professor Will Taub are firmly against it. Thus, you can imagine the heartache of the honest professor, the first man to instruct Joe Louis in the cult of nifty dressing, when he heard that the champ had gone Esquire.

And all through the machinations of a woman! Still, a man's wife is his weakest link, and I guess that that is where Esquire aims its guns. Devilish clever psychology, too.

JOE STUDIED, TOO

Up to the time that Esquire became the logical successor of St. Nicholas, Joe Louis was a faithful pupil of Prof. Taub. I will remember the day when Joe, louging around the professor's laboratory and watching the old alchemist weare a peagreen mohair shooting-jacket (as worn by the Earl of Albemarle and Maxie Rosenbloom) on his loom, began to think of setting the course of his career in the Prof.'s footsteps.

It was then that Professor Taub, the kindly maestro, presented Joe with a rare copy of that scholarly monograph, "Snedecker on How to Match Your Socks and Ties" (50 cents in cloth, $1 in the Morocco binding.)

"Go home and study this volume, Joseph," said Prof. Taub, "and some day you too may be able to tailor the waistcoats of Leo Durocher."

So Joe went home, and the last I heard, he was studying faithfully.

Just when it was the serpent crept into this idyll of the gents' outfitting racket, I do not know. Leafing through Esquire in an idle moment, Joe's wife may have been struck—and there's a nice magazine for you, striking a woman!—by one of those harmonious Esquire Get-ups, consisting of patent leather shoes, mink spats, orange bathing trunks, lavendar Ascot tie, and coonskin cap with pink feather. At any rate, she probably said to Joe:

"Don't you think it's time you spruced up a bit, honey?"

That is hardly the thing to say to a man whose form is sheathed in Taub's chocolate gaberdine, with furnishings to match, but women are a little bit daffy, as a general thing. Anyway, I have it on the oath of the writer of this story about Mr. and Mrs. Joe Louis that Joe's wife is picking his clothes for him, and picking them right out of Esquire's early form, with scratches.

Furthermore—and this is what cuts Professor Taub to the quick—Louis does not deny it. He just shuffles along unhappily, looking like a bleeding bird of paradise.

Prof. Taub is hurt, but still an optimist; he hopes that Joe will not come out for his fight with Arturo Godoy this week wearing Esquire boxing trunks. Those would probably be in some shade of magenta, with pocket attachment for carrying caramels.

Berardino's Grand Slam in 10th Sinks Bosox

Brown Shortstop Hits Homer with Bases Loaded

Wallop Defeats Leaders, 11-7; Judnich Knots Score in Ninth

Two Walks and Two-Bagger by Clift Set Stage for Winning Blow

ST. LOUIS, June 18 (AP)—In as melodramatic a finish as any home fan could dream of, Johnny Berardino, the Brown's sturdy shortstop, smashed out a home run with the bases loaded in the tenth inning today to defeat the league-leading Boston Red Sox, 11 to 7.

The Browns, rapidly convincing even the skeptics that they are not the door-mats of previous years, fought the Red Sox right down the line, pushing a run across in the ninth inning on Don Heffner's single, an error and Walter Judnich's single to tie the score.

George McQuinn opened the tenth by working Jim Bagby for a base on balls. Harlond Clift doubled, McQuinn pulling up at third. Lyn Lary batted for Bill Trotter, the Brown's winning pitcher, and was passed intentionally. Berardino then came through with the grand slam.

It was the fifth time during the game that the Browns had filled the bases.

FACTS for FANS

Only eight points were scored on the Texas Aggies last fall in Southwest Conference football games. The Aggies were champions of the loop, if you remember.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Sports Trail detours:

Tucked away in an old notebook is a quote, scribled under a baking sun last March. Plump Doc Prothro, bravely trying to put some pherocity into the Pheeble Phillies, was the author.

"We are bound to be better this year," the note reads. "We may make some trades, but they won't involve any of our good players.

Heading the list of "good players" at that time was Morrie Arnovich, who the good doctor admitted carried the club the first three months of the 1939 season.

Now the sturdy outfielder from Superior, Wis., has been traded to the Reds, indicating that either the good doctor has only a "yes" vote when the Phillies make deals, or that, in view of Arnovich's .184 batting average, he no longer was classed among the better players.

Anyway, it's a good break for Arnovich, a team player and, when playing his game, a mighty man with a bat. His new environment may be just what he needs to snap him out of a hitting famine.

That's probably the way the Reds figure. They had to do something when the Dorgers got Joe Medwick, and the best bet appeared to be to meet force with force. If Arnovich starts hitting the way he hit early last year, he'll offset the Dodgers' acquisition of Medwick.

Arture Godoy gets his second shot at Joe Louis' heavyweight title tomorrow night, and if he follows the same tactics he used before, when he went 15 rounds by imitating a man crawling under a barbed wire fence, he may go the limit again.

However, we don't look for such a result. His previous success may cause him to open up a little, and when he comes up for air he's going to find himself right on the end of one of Louis' fists.

Added to this probable eventuality is the fact Louis suffered severe wounds in the vicinity of his prestige in the earlier encounter and will be out to heal them in the only way possible—by knocking his nemesis into the middle of next week.

An apathetic Louis may win in any fight, but he may look pretty bad doing it. An aroused Louis is legalized mayhem at its best, or worst. If Godoy goes eight rounds he may go the limit, may even win. But we don't look for him to be there for eight rounds.

The most overlooked and underrated club in the National League is the New York Giants, a team which made its "ifs" come true.

While the Reds and Dodgers have been stalking along in the spotlight, Bill Terry's well-balanced outfit has been paddling along at their heels unnoticed.

Terry this Spring was optimistic, opined that the Giants might be better than the critics thought. But he was relying on rookies at first and second base, on a problem child at third, on a couple of outfielders who have been hearing "happy birthday" too long, and a sewed up and vulcanized pitching staff which might have blowouts at any minute.

And what happens? Babe Young comes through like a veteran at first base. Nick Witek is playing around second base like he owned it, and hitting a slight .353. Burgess Whitehead is playing the best ball of his career at third base. Mel Ott and Jo-Jo Moore are carrying their years like feathers. And the pitchers are pitching baseball.

All in all, it looks like Mr. Terry is doing a bang-up job with a team which most critics had counted out before it climbed in the ring.

Bragan's Circuit Smash in Tenth Brings Defeat to Walters, 3 - 1

Phils's Shortstop Beats Reds Single-Handed with Two Homers

PHILADELPHIA, June 18 (AP)—Shortstop Bob Bragan hit two homers tonight and personally accounted for all the Phillies runs as they beat Cincinnati 3-1.

Despite the loss the Reds continued to lead the loop as Brooklyn dropped a 7-5 decision to St. Louis.

Bragan put on the clincher in the ninth with one out after Merrill May had been passed. The shortstop drove Bucky Walter's offering into the left field bleachers, giving the Phils their first victory in six games.

In the seventh Bragan supplied his team's other run with a circuit clout.

Walters held the Phils to five hits and fanned eight but suffered his fourth straight setback. For Hugh Mulcahy it was his seventh victory.

Berardino's Grand Slam in 10th Sinks Bosox

Brown Shortstop Hits Homer with Bases Loaded

Wallop Defeats Leaders, 11-7; Judnich Knots Score in Ninth

Two Walks and Two-Bagger by Clift Set Stage for Winning Blow

ST. LOUIS, June 18 (AP)—In as melodramatic a finish as any home fan could dream of, Johnny Berardino, the Brown's sturdy shortstop, smashed out a home run with the bases loaded in the tenth inning today to defeat the league-leading Boston Red Sox, 11 to 7.

The Browns, rapidly convincing even the skeptics that they are not the door-mats of previous years, fought the Red Sox right down the line, pushing a run across in the ninth inning on Don Heffner's single, an error and Walter Judnich's single to tie the score.

George McQuinn opened the tenth by working Jim Bagby for a base on balls. Harlond Clift doubled, McQuinn pulling up at third. Lyn Lary batted for Bill Trotter, the Brown's winning pitcher, and was passed intentionally. Berardino then came through with the grand slam.

It was the fifth time during the game that the Browns had filled the bases.

The SPORT TRAIL

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Sports Trail detours:

Tucked away in an old notebook is a quote, scribled under a baking sun last March, Plump Doc Prothro, bravely trying to put some pherocity into the Pheeble Phillies, was the author.

"We are bound to be better this year," the note reads. "We may make some trades, but they won't involve any of our good players.

Heading the list of "good players" at that time was Morrie Arnovich, who the good doctor admitted carried the club the first three months of the 1939 season.

Now the sturdy outfielder from Superior, Wis., has been traded to the Reds, indicating that either the good doctor has only a "yes" vote when the Phillies make deals, or that, in view of Arnovich's .184 batting average, he no longer was classed among the better players.

Anyway, it's a good break for Arnovich, a team player and, when playing his game, a mighty man with a bat. His new environment may be just what he needs to snap him out of a hitting famine.

That's probably the way the Reds figure. They had to do something when the Dorgers got Joe Medwick, and the best bet appeared to be to meet force with force. If Arnovich starts hitting the way he hit early last year, he'll offset the Dodgers' acquisition of Medwick.

Arture Godoy gets his second shot at Joe Louis' heavyweight title tomorrow night, and if he follows the same tactics he used before, when he went 15 rounds by imitating a man crawling under a barbed wire fence, he may go the limit again.

However, we don't look for such a result. His previous success may cause him to open up a little, and when he comes up for air he's going to find himself right on the end of one of Louis' fists.

Added to this probable eventuality is the fact Louis suffered severe wounds in the vicinity of his prestige in the earlier encounter and will be out to heal them in the only way possible—by knocking his nemesis into the middle of next week.

An apathetic Louis may win in any fight, but he may look pretty bad doing it. An aroused Louis is legalized mayhem at its best, or worst. If Godoy goes eight rounds he may go the limit, may even win. But we don't look for him to be there for eight rounds.

The most overlooked and underrated club in the National League is the New York Giants, a team which made its "ifs" come true.

While the Reds and Dodgers have been stalking along in the spotlight, Bill Terry's well-balanced outfit has been paddling along at their heels unnoticed.

Terry this Spring was optimistic, opined that the Giants might be better than the critics thought. But he was relying on rookies at first and second base, on a problem child at third, on a couple of outfielders who have been hearing "happy birthday" too long, and a sewed up and vulcanized pitching staff which might have blowouts at any minute.

And what happens? Babe Young comes through like a veteran at first base. Nick Witek is playing around second base like he owned it, and hitting a slight .353. Burgess Whitehead is playing the best ball of his career at third base. Mel Ott and Jo-Jo Moore are carrying their years like feathers. And the pitchers are pitching baseball.

All in all, it looks like Mr. Terry is doing a bang-up job with a team which most critics had counted out before it climbed in the ring.

Bragan's Circuit Smash in Tenth Brings Defeat to Walters, 3 - 1

Phils's Shortstop Beats Reds Single-Handed with Two Homers

PHILADELPHIA, June 18 (AP)—Shortstop Bob Bragan hit two homers tonight and personally accounted for all the Phillies runs as they beat Cincinnati 3-1.

Despite the loss the Reds continued to lead the loop as Brooklyn dropped a 7-5 decision to St. Louis.

Bragan put on the clincher in the ninth with one out after Merrill May had been passed. The shortstop drove Bucky Walter's offering into the left field bleachers, giving the Phils their first victory in six games.

In the seventh Bragan supplied his team's other run with a circuit clout.

Walters held the Phils to five hits and fanned eight but suffered his fourth straight setback. For Hugh Mulcahy it was his seventh victory.

Hundreds of Garments Made Here Are Being Rushed to War Victims

Hundreds of garments for Europe's suffering war victims were packed last week by Red Cross workers here and are now on their way across the ocean.

The clothing and layettes, knitted and sewed by eighty-five Allegany county women, completes the second quota of supplies made by generous women here for the refugees.

The first shipment was sent to Poland and Finland several months ago. The latest shipment was sent to Europe Saturday on the Red Cross Mercy Ship bound for Bordeaux, France.

This latest shipment included twenty-two men's sweaters, twenty-three children's sweaters, two men's sleeveless sweaters, and twenty women's sweaters. Forty-four dresses were made for women and children. Also included were twenty-four complete layettes, thirty baby sacks, six infant kimonas, twenty caps, thirty-five pairs of bootees, night gowns and shirts. In the two large boxes were also petticoats, panties, night gowns, scarf and caps. All garments bore the label of the Allegany County chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mrs. A. Hammond Amick Jr., production chairman for the county, supervised the work and is now starting on another quota which includes many of the above garments as well as crocheted shawls, caps and socks.

Materials are furnished by the Red Cross. Fifteen percent of the funds received in the war relief drive now being conducted are retained by the local chapters to buy the necessary materials for the production committee. Any person interested in knitting, sewing, and crocheting for the local chapter should communicate with the chairman, Mrs. Amick.

Court Suit Asks Receivership For Oil Company

A petition asking that a receiver be appointed for the Blue Ridge Oil Company, distributors of oil and gasoline in Allegany and Garrett counties, was filed in Circuit Court by William R. Browning.

According to the petition filed by Browing's counsel, Estel C. Kelley, the wholesale firm is indebted to his client for loans and chattel mortgages.

Loans of $6,000 and $3,000 were set out in the petition as being owed to Browing. A mortgage foreclosure in Allegany county amounting to $6,375 also was set forth.

Charging that the firm is now insolvent and unable to pay its debts, the petition asked the court to appoint a receiver to take charge of the property, assets, goods, chattels, books, and effects of the corporation.

WPA To Oil Roads During July

The job of oiling some 100 rural roads in Allegany county will start around the middle of July, Douglas P. LeFevre, assistant district engineer, State Roads Commission, said yesterday.

The board of county commissioners notified LeFevre that the annual levy provides $25,000 as the county's share for the oiling project, which is done by WPA labor.

Engineer LeFevre said 6,000 gallons of oil is laid per day by the oiling crew, using three-quarters of a gollon per square yard. Approximately 6,750 gallons of oil are used per mile.

George Henderson is counsel for the plaintiff. Lazarus, Inc., is represented by Charles Z. Heskett and Clarence Lippel.

Court House Flag To Fly Again

Commissioners Act On VFW's Request

An order that the American flag is to be displayed on the Court House and other county buildings from "sunrise to sunset" was passed yesterday by the county commissioners.

The action was taken at the request of Henry Hart Post, No. 1411, Veteran of Foreign Wars, after the exservice men wrote the commissioners that "the flag is usually taken out of the moth balls only on holidays and other special occasions."

The ex-service men declared it would be more fitting if flags were displayed on the county buildings every day.

Queried last night as to precisely what county buildings will run up the flags in the future, Commissioner Patrick J. "Derby" Stakem replied, "All buildings that have flag poles."

Commissioner Stakem wasn't just sure what buildings had the flag poles, but added the order was meant to apply chiefly to the Court House. The order did not include the public schools, which are under jurisdiction of the board of education.

Two Lawyers Represent Defense; Police, Unaided, Lose Motor Case

Two Humbird street men were acquitted yesterday in Trial Magistrate court on motor charges after police failed to present a convincing case.

The police were not given any legal assistance in their case, however, while the defense was represented by two attorneys.

Then men, Eugene R. Kelley, 102 Humbird street, and Glenn O. Westfall, 43 Humbird street, were freed when police and witnesses failed to identify Kelley as being driver of a car involved in a head-on crash at River avenue Sunday.

Kelley was accused of reckless driving, operating a car without a license, and leaving the scene of an accident. Westfall was charged with allowing an unlicensed person to drive his car.

Clyde Walters, of Chaneysville, Pa., and two other persons in his car, as well as police, told Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., that they were unable to identify the person driving the other car.

Kelley and Westfall, represented by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and Harold E. Naughton, pleaded not guilty to all charges. They were not called upon to testify.

The men were arrested after a coat and other credentials were reportedly found in Westfall's car, which was abandoned after the crash. At the time of his arrest Westfall said Kelley had borrowed his car, police reported.

Rhodendron Buds Watched for Date For Ski Picnic

District Forester H. C. Buckingham announced yesterday that the mountain laurel is coming into bloom in Garrett county and should be at the height of its beauty Sunday.

The display will be especially beautiful, he said, along Meadow Mountain from Grantsville to New Germany and from New Germany down Elk Lick to Savage river.

Mr. Buckingham is keeping a close watch, too, on the rhododendron buds, so that the picnic planned by the Western Maryland Ski club can be held when the bloom will be at its height.

Mr. Buckingham said this will probably be Sunday, June 30, or Sunday, July 7. Announcement of the date for the picnic will be made as soon as possible.

Backyards Prove Important Front In Mosquito War

Neglect at Home Proves Weak Spot In 'Franklin' Line

Cumberland's war on mosquitoes has shown results the last couple of summers, Dr. Joseph P. Franklin said yesterday, but there is still room for improvement.

Two or three chief breeding sources for mosquitoes here, the canal and catch basin, have now been taken care of, Dr. Franklin said.

But there is still room for improvement in the way home owners take care of their backyards, the city and county health officer said.

Dr. E. N. Corey, state entomologist, Dr. Franklin and Pat Cline conducted a mosquito survey in the city last week and discovered that backyards still contain too many empty cans and open containers.

Open containers holding rain water, barrels, tin cans and clogged up rain spouts were mentioned by Dr. Franklin as prime mosquito breeding sources.

"Residents should cooperate in clearing out these mosquito breeding sources," Dr. Franklin said. "For by acting now they can avoid considerable discomfiture later on this summer."

The city, through the street department, has practically eradicated mosquito breeding in catch basins and the canal by the use of oil.

Hundreds gathered to pay tribute at funeral services last week for the minister, who died in front of the altar he had erected in fulfillment of a long-cherished dream. Dr. Pierce was fatally stricken while arranging flowers for a service.

LeCompte Makes Report On Dead Deer in Refuge

Widespread rumors that from twenty-seven to forty deer had been found dead in the deer corral in the Meadow Mountain game refuge were termed a "great mistake" yesterday by State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte.

Actually, LeCompte reporter after a personal investigation, only ten carcasses were found. Seven were of adult deer and three of new-born fawn, which had either been born dead or died a few days after birth.

The deer had apparently been dead for several months, according to the report, which adds that two of them had been dead for more than a year, as the bones were bleached from the sun.

Two Killed by Bobcats

Two had been killed by bobcats. The state game warden, who was assisted in the investigation by Regional Game Warden Joseph A. Minke, District Deputy Game Warden Richard S. Browning and Caretaker Henry Bowman, also said that seventeen adult deer and two fawn were found "alive and in good condition."

Contradicting reports that the deer had starved to death, LeCompte stated that more than three tons of hay had been placed in the corral during the winter, as well as quantities of corn.

Plenty of Food

At the time of his visit to the refuge, LeCompte went on, there was still a small amount of hay which had not been eaten by the deer and also quantities of corn cobs. In addition, he said he also found "plenty of natural food, including laurel and acres of blue grass which would support many more deer than the corral has carried during the past few years."

(LeCompte failed to state in his report, however, whether the hay was placed on racks to prevent its being covered by the winter's deep snows. It was indicated in some quarters that it could have been covered by snow to such a depth that it would not have been available to the deer.

(Neither did LeCompte state whether the corn had been placed where it could be easily reached by the deer.

(With reference to LeCompte's mention of "plenty of natural food" in the corral, it should be pointed out that such is the case at the present time, but this would not be true during the winter, when some of the deer are supposed to have died.

(LeCompte's report also failed to say that adequate food had been placed in the pen soon enough and at regular intervals during the long snowy winter.)

"We are sure the cause of the deaths of these deer was not starvation," LeCompte said, explaining that there are bound to be "weak animals" in the herd.

"We are aware," the report continued, "that the winter of 1940 was a very severe one, and we are probably fortunate that we did not lose more game than was lost."

Warden Censured

Reports of the finding of a large number of carcasses came from Department of Agriculture employes working on the Garrett county blister control project in the white pine forests.

LeCompte's report stated that these men "possibly counted the same carcasses over a number of times."

The report concluded with a word of mild censure for Warden Browning and Caretaker Bowman, declaring that they had been informed that "they should have reported to this department any findings they made of the carcasses of deer within the corral, as we feel that they should be responsible for conditions existing therein."

Investigation "Complete"

LeCompte emphasized that the investigation had been a complete one, with the corral "thoroughly" covered by searchers, and said it was "unfortunate" that the first report was released to the press before an investigation was made.

Meanwhile, Regional Warden Minke reported last night that eight openings had been made in the nine-foot fence surrounding the corral to permit the deer to come and go as they please.

He explained that deer is plentiful now in the Meadow Mountain area and there is little further need, for the present, of keeping the animals penned up. There is a possibility, too, he said, that there are too many in the corral.

Fight Crime for National Defense, Prison Official Urges Rotarians

Capt. Lauer so told Rotarians at their weekly luncheon yesterday at the Fort Cumberland hotel and cited statistics to support his contention.

Lack of educational opportunity was stressed as a prime cause of crime by the citation of statistics about inmates of the Western Pennsylvania penitentiary, where 1,597 of a total of 2,090 inmates were found to have dropped out of school before their primary education was completed. Of those having the most schooling, only twenty-nine were graduated from high school and only nine from college.

Noting that the average criminal in this country today is of younger age, Capt. Lauer devoted the most of his attention to the subject of juvenile delinquency, its causes and remedies.

Three primary causes of crime, the speaker said, are the bad use of leisure time, improper associations and lack of educational opportunity. Also, many men are in prison today, he said, because families fail to live within their incomes and come to extremity in foolish efforts to "keep up with the Joneses." Domestic strife, giving untoward home environment, has moved many young persons to criminal ventures it was asserted. Nine-tenths of the crimes committed today, Capt. Lauer said, are crimes against property motivated by love for money and its power.

Preventive measures recommended included better homes, improvement of the schooling system to care for all types of students, better cities and towns, elimination of slum conditions, better religious influences in home and in church schools, cleaner news stands and closer tab on motion pictures.

The growing crime problem provides soil for the growth of Fifth Column subversiveness throughout the country, Capt. Lauer said. In coping with that he advised everyone to keep a cool head and watch his steps, avoiding hysteria and cooperating with the authorities.

Tomorrow's civiliatzion rests with the children of today, Capt. Lauer said, and the crime problem must be met and not evaded. America's crime bill today is $22,000 a minute, as compared with governmental costs of $1,350 a minute. While 500,000 now occupy cots in prisons of this country, the speaker said, this total is but one-tenth of the number of those mostly younger persons, who are engaged in criminal operations.

Capt. Lauer was pinch-hitting for his superior, J. W. Caludy, superintendent of the Western Pennsylvania penitentiary, who was unexpectedly called to Harrisburg on official business.

The captain is an active Rotarian, being a member of the club at State College, Pa., and having served as president of the clubs at Logan, O., and Dormont, Pa.

Edmund S. Burke introduced J Hall Spear as a newly elected member of the local club. He is the Cumberland district manager of the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company.

War Needs Open Government Jobs For Craftsmen

Calling for chemists to take competitive examinations for government posts, the commission also revealed a demand for skilled craftsmen in various Navy yards.

A commission bulletin urges explosive chemists to apply at once for the examinations now open for the various grades of chemist and chemical technologist positions in the federal service. In connection with the national defense program it says, it is "extremely important" that a large number of well-qualified explosive chemists and chemical technologists be immediately available should vacancies occur in this field.

The salaries for the positions for which these examinations have been announced range from $2,600 to $4,600 annually.

Types of workers needed in Navy yards include machinists, machinist helpers, boilermakers, structural ironworkers, sheet-metal workers, electeric welders, pneumatic drillers, aviation metalsmiths, precision lens, prism and test plate makers, calkers and chippers, loftsmen, shipfitters and helpers, and coppersmiths.

A petition asking that a receiver be appointed for the Blue Ridge Oil Company, distributors of oil and gasoline in Allegany and Garrett counties, was filed in Circuit Court by William R. Browning.

According to the petition filed by Browing's counsel, Estel C. Kelley, the wholesale firm is indebted to his client for loans and chattel mortgages.

Loans of $6,000 and $3,000 were set out in the petition as being owed to Browing. A mortgage foreclosure in Allegany county amounting to $6,375 also was set forth.

Court House Flag To Fly Again

Commissioners Act On VFW's Request

An order that the American flag is to be displayed on the Court House and other county buildings from "sunrise to sunset" was passed yesterday by the county commissioners.

The action was taken at the request of Henry Hart Post, No. 1411, Veteran of Foreign Wars, after the exservice men wrote the commissioners that "the flag is usually taken out of the moth balls only on holidays and other special occasions."

The ex-service men declared it would be more fitting if flags were displayed on the county buildings every day.

Queried last night as to precisely what county buildings will run up the flags in the future, Commissioner Patrick J. "Derby" Stakem replied, "All buildings that have flag poles."

Commissioner Stakem wasn't just sure what buildings had the flag poles, but added the order was meant to apply chiefly to the Court House. The order did not include the public schools, which are under jurisdiction of the board of education.

Two Lawyers Represent Defense; Police, Unaided, Lose Motor Case

Two Humbird street men were acquitted yesterday in Trial Magistrate court on motor charges after police failed to present a convincing case.

The police were not given any legal assistance in their case, however, while the defense was represented by two attorneys.

Then men, Eugene R. Kelley, 102 Humbird street, and Glenn O. Westfall, 43 Humbird street, were freed when police and witnesses failed to identify Kelley as being driver of a car involved in a head-on crash at River avenue Sunday.

Kelley was accused of reckless driving, operating a car without a license, and leaving the scene of an accident. Westfall was charged with allowing an unlicensed person to drive his car.

Clyde Walters, of Chaneysville, Pa., and two other persons in his car, as well as police, told Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., that they were unable to identify the person driving the other car.

Kelley and Westfall, represented by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and Harold E. Naughton, pleaded not guilty to all charges. They were not called upon to testify.

The men were arrested after a coat and other credentials were reportedly found in Westfall's car, which was abandoned after the crash. At the time of his arrest Westfall said Kelley had borrowed his car, police reported.

Mr. Buckingham said this will probably be Sunday, June 30, or Sunday, July 7. Announcement of the date for the picnic will be made as soon as possible.

Backyards Prove Important Front In Mosquito War

Neglect at Home Proves Weak Spot In 'Franklin' Line

Cumberland's war on mosquitoes has shown results the last couple of summers, Dr. Joseph P. Franklin said yesterday, but there is still room for improvement.

Two or three chief breeding sources for mosquitoes here, the canal and catch basin, have now been taken care of, Dr. Franklin said.

But there is still room for improvement in the way home owners take care of their backyards, the city and county health officer said.

Dr. E. N. Corey, state entomologist, Dr. Franklin and Pat Cline conducted a mosquito survey in the city last week and discovered that backyards still contain too many empty cans and open containers.

Open containers holding rain water, barrels, tin cans and clogged up rain spouts were mentioned by Dr. Franklin as prime mosquito breeding sources.

"Residents should cooperate in clearing out these mosquito breeding sources," Dr. Franklin said. "For by acting now they can avoid considerable discomfiture later on this summer."

The city, through the street department, has practically eradicated mosquito breeding in catch basins and the canal by the use of oil.

LeCompte Makes Report On Dead Deer in Refuge

Widespread rumors that from twenty-seven to forty deer had been found dead in the deer corral in the Meadow Mountain game refuge were termed a "great mistake" yesterday by State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte.

Actually, LeCompte reporter after a personal investigation, only ten carcasses were found. Seven were of adult deer and three of new-born fawn, which had either been born dead or died a few days after birth.

The deer had apparently been dead for several months, according to the report, which adds that two of them had been dead for more than a year, as the bones were bleached from the sun.

Two Killed by Bobcats

Two had been killed by bobcats. The state game warden, who was assisted in the investigation by Regional Game Warden Joseph A. Minke, District Deputy Game Warden Richard S. Browning and Caretaker Henry Bowman, also said that seventeen adult deer and two fawn were found "alive and in good condition."

Contradicting reports that the deer had starved to death, LeCompte stated that more than three tons of hay had been placed in the corral during the winter, as well as quantities of corn.

Plenty of Food

At the time of his visit to the refuge, LeCompte went on, there was still a small amount of hay which had not been eaten by the deer and also quantities of corn cobs. In addition, he said he also found "plenty of natural food, including laurel and acres of blue grass which would support many more deer than the corral has carried during the past few years."

(LeCompte failed to state in his report, however, whether the hay was placed on racks to prevent its being covered by the winter's deep snows. It was indicated in some quarters that it could have been covered by snow to such a depth that it would not have been available to the deer.

(Neither did LeCompte state whether the corn had been placed where it could be easily reached by the deer.

(With reference to LeCompte's mention of "plenty of natural food" in the corral, it should be pointed out that such is the case at the present time, but this would not be true during the winter, when some of the deer are supposed to have died.

(LeCompte's report also failed to say that adequate food had been placed in the pen soon enough and at regular intervals during the long snowy winter.)

"We are sure the cause of the deaths of these deer was not starvation," LeCompte said, explaining that there are bound to be "weak animals" in the herd.

"We are aware," the report continued, "that the winter of 1940 was a very severe one, and we are probably fortunate that we did not lose more game than was lost."

Warden Censured

Reports of the finding of a large number of carcasses came from Department of Agriculture employes working on the Garrett county blister control project in the white pine forests.

LeCompte's report stated that these men "possibly counted the same carcasses over a number of times."

The report concluded with a word of mild censure for Warden Browning and Caretaker Bowman, declaring that they had been informed that "they should have reported to this department any findings they made of the carcasses of deer within the corral, as we feel that they should be responsible for conditions existing therein."

Investigation "Complete"

LeCompte emphasized that the investigation had been a complete one, with the corral "thoroughly" covered by searchers, and said it was "unfortunate" that the first report was released to the press before an investigation was made.

Meanwhile, Regional Warden Minke reported last night that eight openings had been made in the nine-foot fence surrounding the corral to permit the deer to come and go as they please.

He explained that deer is plentiful now in the Meadow Mountain area and there is little further need, for the present, of keeping the animals penned up. There is a possibility, too, he said, that there are too many in the corral.

Fight Crime for National Defense, Prison Official Urges Rotarians

A vital part of our national defense problem is that of more effectively combatting the great and growing crime evil, according to Capt. C. T. Lauer, director of restoration at the Western Pennsylvania penitentiary at Bellefont, Pennsylvania.

Capt. Lauer so told Rotarians at their weekly luncheon yesterday at the Fort Cumberland hotel and cited statistics to support his contention.

Lack of educational opportunity was stressed as a prime cause of crime by the citation of statistics about inmates of the Western Pennsylvania penitentiary, where 1,597 of a total of 2,090 inmates were found to have dropped out of school before their primary education was completed. Of those having the most schooling, only twenty-nine were graduated from high school and only nine from college.

Noting that the average criminal in this country today is of younger age, Capt. Lauer devoted the most of his attention to the subject of juvenile delinquency, its causes and remedies.

Three primary causes of crime, the speaker said, are the bad use of leisure time, improper associations and lack of educational opportunity. Also, many men are in prison today, he said, because families fail to live within their incomes and come to extremity in foolish efforts to "keep up with the Joneses." Domestic strife, giving untoward home environment, has moved many young persons to criminal ventures it was asserted. Nine-tenths of the crimes committed today, Capt. Lauer said, are crimes against property motivated by love for money and its power.

Preventive measures recommended included better homes, improvement of the schooling system to care for all types of students, better cities and towns, elimination of slum conditions, better religious influences in home and in church schools, cleaner news stands and closer tab on motion pictures.

The growing crime problem provides soil for the growth of Fifth Column subversiveness throughout the country, Capt. Lauer said. In coping with that he advised everyone to keep a cool head and watch his steps, avoiding hysteria and cooperating with the authorities.

Tomorrow's civiliatzion rests with the children of today, Capt. Lauer said, and the crime problem must be met and not evaded. America's crime bill today is $22,000 a minute, as compared with governmental costs of $1,350 a minute. While 500,000 now occupy cots in prisons of this country, the speaker said, this total is but one-tenth of the number of those mostly younger persons, who are engaged in criminal operations.

Capt. Lauer was pinch-hitting for his superior, J. W. Caludy, superintendent of the Western Pennsylvania penitentiary, who was unexpectedly called to Harrisburg on official business.

The captain is an active Rotarian, being a member of the club at State College, Pa., and having served as president of the clubs at Logan, O., and Dormont, Pa.

Edmund S. Burke introduced J Hall Spear as a newly elected member of the local club. He is the Cumberland district manager of the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company.

War Needs Open Government Jobs For Craftsmen

Chemists Skilled In Explosives Also Sought

The national defense program has opened up jobs for many in the federal government service, according to an announcement by the United States Civil Service Commission.

Calling for chemists to take competitive examinations for government posts, the commission also revealed a demand for skilled craftsmen in various Navy yards.

A commission bulletin urges explosive chemists to apply at once for the examinations now open for the various grades of chemist and chemical technologist positions in the federal service. In connection with the national defense program, it says, it is "extremely important" that a large number of well-qualified explosive chemists and chemical technologists be immediately available should vacancies occur in this field.

The salaries for the positions for which these examinations have been announced range from $2,600 to $4,600 annually.

Types of workers needed in Navy yards include machinists, machinist helpers, boilermakers, structural ironworkers, sheet-metal workers, electeric welders, pneumatic drillers, aviation metalsmiths, precision lens, prism and test plate makers, calkers and chippers, loftsmen, shipfitters and helpers, and coppersmiths.

Two children inherited the bulk of the estate of Mrs. Mary B. Gloss, the will probated in the Orphan's Court revealed yesterday.

Mrs. Gloss, of 819 Gephart drive, who died June 3, bequeathed her paintings and other objects of art to her son, Thomas F. Gloss, and her daughter, Ellen E. Keene. All jewelry owned by Mrs. Gloss was also willed to her daughter.

A niece and nephew, John Footer Spitznas and Naomi Elizabeth Spitznas, each was willed $1,000 in cash.

All the rest of the estate was willed as follows: Twenty per cent to her husband, Cephas H. Gloss, and the remaining eighty per cent to the two children, Thomas F. Gloss and Ellen E. Keene.

The will pointed out that all real estate was owned jointly by Mr. and Mrs. Gloss and at her death reverted to him.

The document was drawn July 11, 1935, and was witnessed by Bertie M. Spitznas, Ethel Walker and Morris Baron. Mrs. Gloss' husband and son were named executors of the estate.
